Death Claims Veteran Vaudeville
Star and Member of Famous Marco Team, Who Learned His Art Here

Almost unnoticed, James McLaughlin died Sunday in St. Mary's Hospital. Had the name of James Marco of the Marco Twins, long famous in vaudeville, been used, wires to all parts of the country would have been burning with the news of his death. Yet, James McLaughlin and James Marco were one and the same person.

James McLaughlin was born in this city and received his early knowledge of acrobatics in the old sawdust pit under the Smith Street bridge. Cass Shalley, another Rochester boy of the well known team of Hall and Shasley, who entertained as the "Twentieth Century Burghers," and the "Musical Blacksmithes" over the Keith loop, recalled the days of the old sawdust pit which was to give to vaudeville such entertainers as McLaughlin, Jack Ashby and Dick Kelly.

As sure as daylight every morning, this group of young men visited the spot, where hidden from view they were able to practice their stunts and attain perfection which later won for them the esteem of audiences throughout this country and in Europe.

Engaged for New York.

While in Europe, McLaughlin was engaged by Oscar Hammerstein to appear in his theater in New York City. McLaughlin and his partner recreated the Atlantic, but just before they were to make their debut, McLaughlin and his partner had an argument with Hammerstein and the latter refused to let them use the Atlantic. Every evening through the period of their concert, McLaughlin and his partner recreated the Atlantic entrance, but were refused admittance to the theater. The team carried the case into court and recovered the salaries for the whole term of the contract without having given a single performance. To win the suit, it was necessary for McLaughlin to appear at the door of the theater every day in makeup in hand, ready to go on, if the door were opened to them.

McLaughlin was instrumental in getting Edward Fay into Rochester. He met Fay in Providence and told him of the opportunity here. Mr. Fay accompanied McLaughlin here and the result was the opening of Fay's Theater.

In his theatrical life, McLaughlin cultivated a warm friendship with Alexander Pantages, well known vaudeville producer, in the west and annually toured his theaters.

When the news of McLaughlin's illness reached the National Vaudeville Artists in New York City, they immediately wired Manager Harry Mitchell, manager of Keith Theater here, to see that McLaughlin was not neglected.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning from St. Patrick's Cathedral. Manager Mitchell has been asked to represent the vaudeville artists at the services.

The bearers, all bowing with grief of the dead man, will be Richard Shalley, Thomas Capitono, Frank Schecter, John Wuls, Frank Myers and Cass Shalley.

George L. Meade, former state senator, four times a deputy attorney general of New York state and well known in political and legal circles of the city, died yesterday at his home, No. 200 Birt street. The day before he had attended to his work as a member of the law firm of Webster, Meade & Strain. In the evening he visited with friends at the Rochester Club. Heart disease ended his career at 6 o'clock yesterday morning.

Mr. Meade had many important cases for the state during his tenure of office under Attorney-General Woodbury, Lewis, Newton & Sherman. He represented the state in trials of cases before the Court of Claims and his record was such that, after the last election, he was again tendered a deputyship. He declined because of the demands made upon him by his private practice.

In Assembly Two Years.

Born at Clyde on April 25, 1850, the son of Emily Millius and Montgomery W. Meade, he was graduated from the Clyde Female School and then from Lebanon College at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1869. In December, 1884, he married Adahela J. Osztander, of this city. He went to New York and began the study of law with the then well known firm of Beals, Beekley & Russell. He was admitted to the bar in 1869. In 1905 he became a member of the firm with which he was connected at the time of his death.

He always was an active political figure. He served as supervisor of the Sixth District from 1903 to 1905. In 1906 to 1909 he represented the Third district in the Assembly and was elected to the Senate from the Forty-sixth district in 1909, serving two terms. In the Senate he he was chairman of the joint legislative commission which investigated the direct primary law throughout the United States and he was largely responsible for the enactment of the legislation by which the former State Industrial School was converted into the present Edgerton Park.

In 1915, he entered upon his first terms as deputy attorney general in the Court of Claims, an office in which he won distinction. Former State Senator George H. Arnettger, who was Albany when Mr. Meade was there, said yesterday:

"I knew him to be an honest, hard-working and competent fellow and I am sorry his death has come so suddenly."
Walter Moses, of Livingston county, assistant clerk of the Assembly, said:

"I remember him as a man with marked attributes and unsurpassing ideal which regards his legislative duties quite consistently with his practice at the bar. But it was apparent from the first, and it became more apparent as his career developed, that his political interests did not submerge his interest in the welfare of the community. He rose steadily in politics, but he also extended his legal knowledge and practice, so that when opportunity came to win a desirable post in the public service he had the knowledge and ability to fill it with distinction and with advantage to the public.

It is the usual thing for young attorneys to be interested in public affairs and it is quite the unusual thing for political leaders to be attracted to them and to make their rise easy and pleasant. It is not unusual, however, for young lawyers who are given political opportunities to become so dazed by the limelight of public favor as to forget proper attention to the study of their exacting profession and so to lack the ability to fill higher political posts acceptably.

Here was a man of the right type; one who was interested in public affairs and willing to serve the public. The limelight did not dazzle him; he went steadily forward in the study and practice of the law. When he was appointed deputy attorney-general he served with such ability and effect that it could be said that the state was fortunate to be able to command his services as he was to win the appointment.

Such careers as Senator Meade's should have the direct effect of encouraging more of our young lawyers to take a serious interest in public affairs. They also should inspire them, in the pursuit of such interest and in the enjoyment of any public-preference they may attain, to continue their steady devotion to the study of their profession.

TRIBUTES PAID DR. MOREY FOR SERVICE AS TEACHER.

"Loved in Classroom by U.R. Students of Two Generations.

Jan. 7-19

Funeral services for Dr. William Carey Morey, for fifty-two years a member of the University of Rochester faculty, who died early yesterday morning at his home, No. 94 Oxford street, will take place at the home Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock. Rev. George E. Norton, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church, will conduct the services.

The death of Dr. Morey, who for many years was the dean of University teaching staff, brought forth unceasing tributes yesterday from Dr. Rhees, president of the University, his teaching. Dr. Rhees on the memory and distinction to the University during the first half-century of its life.

The death of Professor Morey marks the end of one of the country's greatest educational leaders. He was an unceasingly a Teacher.

Professor Morey's services to the University in Rochester in 1868. Dr. Morey spent one year as a student in the Rochester Institute of Technology, and from 1889 to the time of his retirement from active service in 1940 he was continuously engaged in teaching and law in American and since 1872 in the University of Rochester.

Beginning his service in Rochester as Professor of Latin, in which subject he had added history, he was made Professor of English and political science in 1886 and continued that work for thirty years. He was pre-eminent a teacher in political science, using the study of history as a means of philosophy, considering the causes which had operated in the development of the modern political system. His philosophical analysis was manifested further in his introduction into his program of instruction in the Roman law and international law. Morey was profoundly interested in the Constitution of the country, and his teaching was directed to the development of an intelligent understanding of that fundamental law of the country. Having spent three years as a lawyer in the Civil War from 1864 to 1866, he had throughout his life a profound interest in the military strategies which resulted in the various stages of the Civil War.

In Admiration of Students.

As a teacher he was characterized by the use of a meritorious method required of his students close and personal inspection of their work. The power of his intellect, the efficacy of his teaching and the appreciation of his students, came from his study of the works of the students and his teaching and his student effort was directed to the development and improvement of the student's work.

Instruction came to look upon him as the most significant influence in the development of their intellectual and cultural lives and cherished the memory of the years under his instruction as a priceless treasure among their spiritual and intellectual possessions.

As an author, Dr. Morey published a number of important volumes, two of which were of outstanding significance; first, his "Outlines of Roman Law" published in 1849, and his "Outlines of Roman History" published in 1900. The "Outlines of Roman Law" made a strong impact on the students of this subject and they were published in 1849 and highly appreciated by advanced students of Roman history. All of his books were characterized by the clear analysis and philosophical grasp which marked his teaching.

Loss to Rochester.

The University of Rochester cherished him as one of the brightest stars in its galaxy of great teachers. His passing emphasized the loss to Rochester which he had come in the death of such teachers as Matthew Arnold, A. C. Kendrick, Samuel A. Lattimore, Henry P. Burton, who worked through the first half of this century's life and gave it characteristic and distinctive. His colleagues in the faculty of the University have honored him and admired him, and rejoiced in the privilege of association with him in the work of the Institution, have sympathized with his growing weakness in his last years, and have joined with his students in rendering to him the tribute of equal admiration and affection. Rarely has an educator made such a large measure of recognition and regard.

Dr. Lawrence B. Packard, who succeeded Dr. Morey as Watson professor of history when the latter retired from active teaching in 1900, declared that it would be difficult to imagine a more impression made by an instructor on the man of his classes than that made by Professor Morey.

WILLIAM CAREY MOREY.

From a photograph taken in 1866 when he was a student at the University of Rochester.

The death of Professor William Carey Morey removes from the social and intellectual life of Rochester one of its leading figures and from scholastic circles in the United States an educator of recognized breadth and eminence.

Professor Morey had many engaging qualities and many claims for distinction but his place in the life of Rochester, and in the intellectual life of the United States rests securely on his ability as a teacher. He was a profound and capable student of history and political science as applied to local, national and international fields, but he had an intuitive appreciation and capacity had the capacity to convey his knowledge in such a simple, human terms as could be understood by an average intelligence. To this quality must be added the remarkable and widespread success of his textbooks on Roman law, New York state history, ancient history; and to this quality and his unerring judgment of human nature must be credited the enormous popularity of his classes with two generations of students at the University of Rochester. The college years were given as often in his honor as in honor of any athletic hero or "Uncle Bill," and always he was referred to by that title of affectionate address which all his students knew. "Uncle Bill."

It was a solemn and saddening coincidence to many that the same issue of the newspaper which chronicled Professor Morey's death should announce the resignation from the faculty of his successor, Professor Packard, who both in capacity as a teacher of similar subjects and in his hold on the student body was coming into his own as Professor Morey's successor. Indeed, it had been much for much congratulation to the University and to Dr. Rhees, its president, in the last few years when Professor Packard and Perkins had been no less high in the high standards of the department of history and political science which had been raised and maintained for so many years by Professor Morey. Professor Perkins remains, but the absence of his colleagues is keenly felt.

Professor Morey was one of the great men of the University in what time may be the first year of its development. It has been said many times, but it cannot be said too often that the new epoch on which the University is entering in all probability would not have been and is not justified; if the Professor Morey's type had not carried the development in the first epochal period, and if their standards had not been sustained and developed under such leaders as Dr. Rhees and Professor Morey's successor.
Respect is due the college instructor who knows his subject and teaches it conscientiously and thoroughly.

If he is in addition an original investigator and scholar, adding to the sum total of human knowledge and presenting his information in a manner that makes it available for others, his contribution is still more enduring.

Professor William Carey Morey was for many years an active member of the faculty of the University of Rochester. It was a dull and careless student who failed to learn something in his classes regarding the subjects which he presented with such clearness, backed by a wealth of knowledge.

Author of a textbook upon Roman law which was widely used in the universities and colleges of the country, as well as of other authoritative textbooks and monographs on international law and political science, Dr. Morey exercised a wide influence upon the teaching of these subjects.

The greatest teacher is he who can not only impart knowledge and skillfully direct study but can also inspire and stimulate his students to think for themselves. That is the highest and most valuable form of intellectual training, since it yields fruit long after the specific knowledge acquired in the classroom has become dim.

This rare ability was possessed by Professor Morey. He urged his students to think, often turning aside from the set routine to present an interesting topic and arouse a stimulating discussion, which he controlled and guided through his wealth of information and capacity for clear and searching analysis. Many of his students have testified to this exceptional quality of Dr. Morey as an instructor.

William Carey Morey always did his full part. He served in the Civil War with conspicuous zeal, attaining the rank of captain and the brevet of lieutenant-colonel in the Union army.

He was an active force in the intellectual life of the city, a citizen of whom Rochester was justly proud and whose loss will be widely felt.
MRS. H. EMILY WELLS

From a photograph taken when she was at the height of her artistic career.

Mrs. H. Emily Wells, for years one of this city's leading artists, died early yesterday morning at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harrison A. Balderidge, No. 12 Lambert-son park, where she had made her home for some time. She leaves a brother, Sidney Perkins, and three nephews, Professor Samuel Hayes, of Mount Holyoke College; Professor Joseph Hayes, of New York, and Harold Hayes, Rochester.

While the greater number of persons who knew Mrs. Wells will remember her as an artist, her attainments were many. She was familiar with French, Spanish and Italian languages. She tutored young pupils in Latin and mathematics.

Mrs. Wells contributed almost constantly to some branch of art with her brush since she came to Rochester more than twenty-five years ago. Her pictures were seen at exhibitions of the Rochester Art Club. Three times her pictures hung in the city won prizes. Two of these were views of landscapes bordering the Genesee river, exhibited at the Memorial Art Gallery. One was a view of a west end of Court street bridge, where the Club-Peabody factory stands with its statue of Mercury. Another was a view looking north from the Clarissa street bridge.

Mrs. Wells painted miniature and large portraits. Her ability to restore old pictures was exceptional. For years she did all of this work for the Brodhead gallery in East avenue. Some persons have said that the finest picture she ever painted was her last, head of the '39 Child.

Mrs. Wells was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jeannick W. Perkins, late of this city. They lived in Ohio, where she was born, before coming to Rochester. Later, they moved to Oswego, where Mrs. Wells received her early education and was graduated from the Oswego Normal School. She studied painting under Henry W. Ranger, a celebrated artist, in Syracuse, at the same time continuing the study of music and languages. After coming to Rochester, she joined the Rochester Art Club and later was made an honorary member.

Though advanced in years, Mrs. Wells showed great ability in art in the last period of her life. Both of the prizes awarded her were won within the last eight or ten years. In her last illness the same mental vigor that had been so marked a characteristic did not forgive her. Only last week her friends who called on her found her mind as alert as ever. The late George W. Hendle, director of the Memorial Art Gallery, and Harvey Ellis, a well-known painter, were among her friends. George H. Brodhead was a long time friend, who yesterday paid her a warm tribute.

During the Spanish-American and World wars, she found time to do a great deal of patriotic work. In the late war she sacrificed her time and money to a degree that some of her friends thought unreasonable, but she put the same de-done for Rev. Arthur F. Florence, of S.S. Peter and Paul's Church.

DR. MOREY PRaised AS LASTING FIGURE

AT U. OF R. SERVICE

D. C., FEB. 8

Faculty and Alumni Tribute

Given Late Professor at Memorial Meeting.

Qualities which gave to the late Dr. William Carey Morey his commanding position in the enduring traditions of the University of Rochester were reviewed by those who perhaps knew him best at a special memorial service in Catherine Strong Hall yesterday afternoon, with the members of the University faculty in attendance. Extremely simple, the services revealed the esteem in which Dr. Morey was held and the strength of his impression upon the University, his colleagues and the students.

Dr. Bush, President, speaking briefly of the faculty members who before their deaths had attained permanent positions in the history of the University, listed Dr. Morey among the strongest of factors which have determined the growth and success of the university.

Speaking for the faculty from memories gathered during thirty-eight years acquaintance with Dr. Morey on the faculty, Dr. George M. Forbes, head of the department of philosophy, stressed the late professor’s devotion to his subject as the means through which all of his aims for the students were to be realized.

Superintendent Herbert W. Wooten, who was University registrar for a time, represented the alumni and Board of Trustees. He described Dr. Morey as “free from everything savoring of the pedant or the moralist”, and as a man of clear judgment, who never swore for effect in his justified courtroom use of wit or sarcasm. Dr. Morey was a teacher who suspended judgment until the facts were in, he said, and his great gift of service was the molding of citizens.

Concluding the service, Professor Lawrence B. Packard recalled his own coming to the University twelve years ago, inexperienced and young, to teach history in Dr. Morey’s department. To the late professor’s tolerance and absolute freedom from the imposing of restrictions, he said he had found, and the success he later attained in the department, Dr. Packard Funded particularly the liberal influence which Dr. Morey left with everyone with whom he came into contact. This quality he pointed out, enabled him to command the respect of his fellow man, a quality which, he added, was unprecedented. Addressed to this, Dr. Packard said, he was straightforward, honest, and good-natured, an untiringly conscientious man who was in the truest sense a man of his word.
VETERAN COURT CLERK DIES IN HIS 79TH YEAR

Newell C. Fulton Passes Away After Protracted Illness — Was Supreme Court Clerk for Period of 38 Years.

Newell C. Fulton, 83 years chief clerk of the Fourth Division of the Supreme Court, 38 years with the Appellate Division and a veteran of the Civil War, died yesterday after a long illness. Mr. Fulton was born in Rochester December 9, 1845, and with the exception of two years during the Civil War and a short period in Chicago, Ill. passed his entire life in this city. He was the first clerk of the Appellate Division, highest branch of the Supreme Court, which had its inception January 1, 1846. He served in that capacity until his retirement in 1921. Prior to his appointment to the Appellate Division, Mr. Fulton was, for 12 years, assistant and chief clerk of the Supreme and General Court, the only break in his service coming when a Democratic administration was elected in the early '80's. During this administration he was circulation manager of the Democrat and Chronicle. Due to his untiring labor, complete record books were ready for the Appellate Division when it had its birth. These books were done on Mr. Fulton's own time and without remuneration because the state legislature had neglected to provide funds for the purpose. In the early days, all the work of the court was done by Mr. Fulton alone, a corps of assistants being established only during the later years.

NEWELL C. FULTON.

NEARLY 25 YEARS AGO Mr. Fulton was a short, spare, wiry fellow and when relatively young. He was a man of few words and few friends, he had no love for the world and the world had little for him. Few people knew him personally, but everyone was familiar with his name and work. He was a man of stern and uncompromising character and his work was his life. He was a man of few friends and few interests, but his work was his life and he lived for it.

Until January Rev. Mr. Beaven was associate minister of the church and then was made pastor emeritus by action of the congregation. Shortly after, he was taken ill and had been confined to his home since. For many years of his life Rev. Mr. Beaven was engaged in religious pioneer work in small communities of the Far West, where he founded fourteen churches in the course of his ministry. He also founded and built a home for missionaries' children and helped build three high schools and a seminary. He exercised much influence in the life of the communities in which he worked.

At the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, to which he came in 1894, he was affectionately known as "Father" Beaven. His decade of service there won him a deep regard in the congregation and a host of friends outside the church.

He was born in Bradford-on-Avon, England, on February 25, 1819, the descendant of generations of clergymen. Coming to America when 10 years old, he landed in Montreal, and started for the East, being one of the first Yankees to settle in the continent. After studying in McMinnville College in Oregon, he became a home missionary. His last charge before coming East was as an assistant pastor of the First Church of Tacoma, Wash.

His wife, Mrs. Lizzie J. Beaven, who survives him, is well known throughout the city through her activities in religious work. Besides Dr. J. W. Beaven he leaves (20) other sons, Dr. Paul W. Beaven and Joseph C. Beaven, both of this city, and two daughters, Mrs. W. L. Bridget and Mrs. William Platt, of this city.

Tribute.

Aged Pastor

Is Laid A Rest Today

The last rites for the Rev. Samuel A. Beaven, pastor emeritus of Lake Avenue Baptist Church, and one of the most beloved and revered ministers of Rochester, were read this afternoon in the church auditorium, by his son, the Rev. Dr. Albert W. Beaven, assisted by the Rev. Dr. Clarence A. Barbour, president of Rochester Theological Seminary. Members of the church choir, under direction of George E. Fisher, sung, and a special duet was sung by Mrs. C. A. Howland and Ralph Scobell. The active clergymen were two sons, Drs. Paul and Joseph Beaven, son-in-law, William Platt, and a brother, the Rev. Joseph Beaven, of Rochester, Minn.

The board of trustees and deacons of Lake Avenue Baptist Church served as honorary bearers, and the board of deacons of the church formed a guard of honor for the body as it lay in state in the Memorial Parlor, at the church, from 11 o'clock this morning until the time of the services. Burial was in Riverside Cemetery.

Throughout yesterday and today, hundreds of Rochesterians called at the house, at 30 Rochester street, to express their sympathy to the family of this pioneer minister and Rochesterian. And throughout today, up to the time of the funeral, there was a continual line of misanthropes and friends in the Barnett Memorial Parlor, paying a final tribute.

Professor C. H. Meskill, of the Rochester Theological Seminary, who substituted in the pulpit yesterday, said of the Rev. Mr. Beaven, in his sermon: "Father Beaven, pioneer, patriot and preacher. He knew private and distress but never faltered. His was the enthusiasm of youth. He could not grow old. He believe in the next generation, he rose to hold the ordination of the young gentlemen. His ministry had, as its chief aim, "the Word with power", he said. No pastor ever had a more loyal associate minister than ours during the last decade. Father Beaven, as we delighted to call him was more than 180 per cent. Last Tuesday I spoke to him for the last time. That incomparable smile played around his lips. Hard work was written on his face. Love was there. God was there. There was a man sent from God, and his name was Samuel Beaven."

Special memorial services have been arranged by the church for Sunday, March 8, and at the Wednesday evening services the Rev. Dr. Albert W. Beaven will spend the devotional hour speaking of experiences with his father during the past week. Wednesday would have been the 76th birthday of his father.

Folks, now patent counsel for the Western Electric and Telegraph Company in New York.

Mr. Barton's life was spent mainly in Chicago, where for many years he was a member of the Union League Club. He served as president of the Chicago Patent Law Association shortly before he retired, in 1912.

In the office of D. C. Tanner at No. 156 Broadway, New York, is framed an old mortgage note, with a description by George Barton, telling how his mother raised $400 by mortgaging her home so that the older son, Edwin M. Barton, could buy a business in Cleveland and out of which grew the Western Electric Company.

Mr. Barton first married Lucy Nichols, daughter of Colonel William T. Nichols, of Rutland, Vt., the founder of the town of Rutland, Vt., who died in 1801. E. S. HOAGLAND, VETERAN RAIL WORKER, DEAD Central Station Master for Fourteen Years Mourned by Wide Circle.

ACTIVE IN Y. M. C. A.
Company, Association Chiefs Voice Grief; Rail Heads among Close Friends.

Edwin S. Hoagland, for fourteen years station master at the New York Central station and a figure known to thousands of travelers, railroad employees and officials, passed away Wednesday morning at his home, No. 98 Hobart street. News of the passing of a man, considered by many the most popular railroad man in Western New York, traveled quickly and messages of condolence began to pour into the Hobart street home in the early hours of the evening. Among the first to express his bereavement was T. W. Evans, vice-president of the New York Central Railroad.

Mr. James, an superintendent of the Rochester division of the New York Central fourteen years ago, promoted Mr. Hoagland to the position which he held until his death, sent the following telegram to Mrs. Hoagland:

Central Chief Voices Grief.

"Please accept Mr. James' sympathy in deep sympathy on the occasion of the passing of one so closely associated with the railroad service of the station and the central railroad of the nation.

Mr. Hoagland was in the employ of the New York Central during the entire thirty-three years of his residence in Rochester. Previously for several years he had been connected with the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad at Ithaca. During the two-score years of employment as a railroad official, Mr. Hoagland acquired a host of friends both within and outside of the organizations with which he was connected. Among his intimate friends outside of the New York Central were W. T. Howard, president of the Buffalo, Rochester & Pittsburgh Railway Company, and John St. B. Stock, president of the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railroad Company.

Throughout his Rochester residence Mr. Hoagland was a participant in the activities of the Railroad Y. M. C. A.

Mourned by Many

EDWIN S. HOAGLAND.

Frederick D. Lamb, secretary of the Railroad branch of the Y. M. C. A., characterized Mr. Hoagland as a man who in all of the years of his railroad experience, had never made an enemy and as one who had given more than generous time and effort to the organization. In commenting upon his death Mr. Lamb said:

"I am inexpressibly shocked at the death of my dear friend, Edwin S. Hoagland, who was one of the most devoted and valuable members of our organization. Mr. Hoagland was one of the plainest and most unpretentious men I have ever known, but his sterling qualities made him a general favorite beloved by all. He was easily the most popular railroad man in Western New York and was considered to be one of the most competent employees of the New York Central."

Active in Y. M. C. A.

During practically the whole of his life here Mr. Hoagland served as recording secretary of the Committee of Management of the Railroad Y. M. C. A. For many years he was first prize in the annual membership contest of the branch and for the last five years he had served as chairman of the committee in charge of the annual Coamburg excursion of railroad men. He was a member of the Quarter Century Club, composed of railroad men who have been members of the branch for twenty-five years.

On the occasion of his elevation to the office of station master here in 1913 he was the guest of honor at the largest and most representative reception ever given a railroad official here. The gathering attracted the largest attendance of any event ever held in the rooms of the Railway Y. Ten prominent railroad officials and civic leaders, including the late Major Hiram H. Edgerton, presented Mr. Hoagland on behalf of ten organizations.

Mr. Hoagland was born at Union Springs on March 1, 1862, his death occurring on his birthday. His father was Henry Harrison Hoagland and his mother, Mary White Hoagland. He was educated in the schools in the vicinity of Union Springs and later attended a military academy. He began his railroad career as station agent for the D. L. & W. at Ithaca. Shortly after he entered the employ of the New York Central here he was advanced to the position of night stationmaster, which he held until his advancement to station master.

Funeral Wednesday.

Mr. Hoagland was a member of Ho- banco Lodge, F. and A. M.; Eagle Chapter, Royal Arch Masons, and St. Augustine Commandery, Knights Templar, all of Ithaca; the New York Central Athletic Association, and St. Andrew's Church, although in recent years he attended St. Stephen's.

He leaves his wife, Alice Paul Hoagland; a son, Harold E. Hoagland, of Ithaca; and two grandchildren. Funeral services will take place at the home at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Rev. Jerome E. Kates, rector of St. Stephen's Church, will officiate. Burial will be made in Mount Hope cemetery.

In the death of Leo I fear I have lost a loyal and true friend, declared Captain McDonald this morning.

On the 5th last Leo was given a leave of absence from the department to attend to his health. It was to be presented to him when he was taken ill and the men were waiting for him to recover.

Burial was made in the family lot at Holy Sepulcher Cemetery.

Wife Of President Erb Died In Hospital Here

Death of President of Ann Arbor Railroad, Yesterday, in New York City, Recalls Accident in Which Mrs. Erb Was Fatally Injured on September 25, 1904 — Homeopathic Hospital Received Gift From Husband.

The death of Newman Erb, president of the Ann Arbor Railroad, in the osseum Hospital, New York city, yesterday, following an operation, recalls the circumstances of the death of Mrs. Erb's wife in the Homeopathic Hospital in this city on Sept. 25, 1904, following injuries received in an accident which occurred early in the morning on that day when the Western Express, of the New York Central left the rails near Lock Berlin.

The incident was recalled this morning by Leonard M. Weiner of the L. M. Jeffreys Company of 22 Chestnut street. Mr. Weiner has an unusually complete series of scrapbooks containing clippings concerning the deaths of prominent people and in this book was found the account of the accident.

Mrs. Erb was the only person who suffered fatal injuries in the wreck. At the time of the crash she was in her berth in the Pullman and, when found, was wedged beneath the wreckage in such a manner that both legs were crushed. Mr. Erb was badly bruised and received a fracture of the wrist, but he led the rescue party and as soon as Mrs. Erb was released from the wrecked train he brought her to Rochester on a special train for which the lines were cleared. On the train were Dr. N. M. Collins of this city and Dr. Putnam of Lyons who did all that was possible for the injured woman during the arduous journey. Who neared arrived at the hospital it was found that her legs were so badly crushed that they must be amputated. Other injuries prevented Mrs. Erb from ravigting from the shock of the operation and she died at noon. Notes in Mr. Weiner's scrapbook show that the body was forwarded to New York city for burial by the Jeffreys Company. According to other clippings in the book Mr. Erb, who was then president of the Pere Marquette Railroad, was so grateful to the Homeopathic Hospital for the care given to his wife that he not only sent a personal letter of thanks to the directors, but sent a contribution of $2,500 to be hospital as a memorial and also sent gifts to each nurse who had been employed on the case.

The scrapbooks which furnished the information given above were begun by Mr. Weiner as a hobby but have become invaluable both to him and to many who consult them as a record of prominent Rochesterians reaching back to 1903. Mr. Weiner has indexed and cross-indexed the scrapbooks so that the material contained in the newspaper clippings is easily available. The books are often consulted by attorneys and others interested in the settlement of estates, since they contain not only the dates of deaths but lists of relatives of those whom they concern.

Mr. Weiner also has a collection of Rochester directories from 1880 onward, the books having been acquired, year by year, as they were issued; by the Jeffreys firm which has been in existence in Rochester for 75 years.
FRANK G. PATCHIN.

F. G. PATCHIN,
EDITOR, WRITER
DIES IN SOUTH

Author of Tales for Young Had His Last Position on Democrat and Chronicle.

Well Known as Writer

In the summer home of his brother at Stewart, N.Y., Mr. Patchin had spent part of all of last winter. Not long ago he wrote a cheerful letter to a member of this newspaper's staff, whose death was a shock to his former associates, as they believed that he would regain his full strength, if he had not already found it.

Friday, Mrs. Alfred Edward Botham, of Brooklyn,
Mr. Patchin's daughter, received word that her father was seriously ill. She called his physician, Dr. Jackson, Fl. over the long-distance telephone, and learning further particulars, immediately started for that city, where the patient is in St. Luke's Hospital that city.

Saturday, Mrs. Patchin, her mother, was notified by wire at her husband's condition, but having been in bed, was unable to make the trip South. She was kept informed of Mr. Patchin's condition until the last. The last message informed her that their dauter would arrive with her father's body in Wayland, Wednesday, to-morrow, and directed her to leave Rochester at 7 o'clock in the morning. The Masons of Wayland are to meet the train bearing Mr. Patchin's casket, and they will make arrangements for the funeral.

Publicity Director in War.

Mr. Patchin was born in Wayland.

His career was the late Dr. Cameron Patchin, a physician and surgeon, coming of a family of doctors. His mother's name before her marriage was Miss Harrriet Glines. Mr. Patchin attended a grammar school in Wayland, the Dansville Seminary; the Genesee State Normal, where he indulged in preparations for college, and in 1884 he was gradu-atod from Cornell University with the degree of master of arts. One year later he received a diploma from the Albany Law School of Union University.

During the World war, Mr. Patchin was assistant publicity director for the Liberty Loan campaigns in New York city, was publicity director for a Red Cross drive in that city, and served in the same capacity there for the $1,000,000 Jewish war relief drive. In the closing year of the war was assistant national publicity director for the War Service Department of Labor, in Washington.

Mr. Patchin was at different periods of his writing career a reporter on the New York Press, the New York Journal, copy-reader, assistant Sunday reader and then city editor. He was night editor of the New York Recorder and city editor of the Washington Post, in special writer for the New York World.

As the author of his many books of juvenile fiction, Mr. Patchin won a wide friendship among young boys and girls.
He frequently received letters from readers of his stories, owing to their interest in certain characters he had created.

Traveled in Many Climes.

Mr. Patchin had widely traveled.
He took some of the journeys to gather material for his books. This experience, made his readers feel they actually had been introduced to the characters of whom they read. He was skillful in portraying adventure without those obtrusive elements which sometimes start boys and girls on a dangerous path.
His heroes and heroines were wholesome characters, but were able to be impossibly perfect while their experiences were sufficiently thrilling to hold interest of either boys or girls or adults.

Mr. Patchin visited nearly every part of the world except South America.
He joined jungle hunters in Borneo and Sumatra. He crossed the Sahara Desert with an Egyptian caravan and at one time lived in a head hunters' village in Borneo. He went around the globe on one voyage and on another sea trip was a guest on a United States man-of-war.
He once went as pursuer on a vessel because the only way he could take passage was as a member of the crew.

For two years he was a member of the press department of Barnum and Bailey's Circus. There he gained interesting material for some of his books.

Mr. Patchin leaves his wife, Miss Elizabeth Collier Patchin, of Alexander, this city: one son, Cameron A. Patchin, of New York; one daughter, Mrs. Alfred Edward Botham, of Brooklyn, and one brother, Bert C. Patchin, of Patchinville, N. Y., and of Stewart, Fla.

He was a member of the New York Press Club, the New York Athletic Club, the Theta Delta Chi fraternity, and the National Theta Delta Chi Club, in New York.

GRIDIRON STAR OF DECADE AGO, DIES AT HOME

Conrad R. Koegler, Captain and Star Tackle of Varsity in 1911—Called One of "Best Sports" Who Ever Wore Yellow.

Death called "time out" last night for Conrad "Duke" Koegler, described as one of the "best sports" who ever wore the University of Rochester uniform on a football field. After a fight against illness, as game as any battle ever fought

"Duke," his college nickname stuck to him in after years, came to the university in 1906 from the High School of Commerce in Brooklyn, where he had been a member of the school's varsity football squad. His ability in the line brought him a berth on the varsity team at the university in his freshman year, and from that time on he was considered one of the best tackles ever developed at Rochester.

Hugh Smith, alumni secretary of the university, this morning recalled an incident of the Rochester-Columbia game of 1911 when "Duke" was captain. Toward the end of the second half the score was 8-0 in Rochester's favor and both teams were playing in that desperate fashion common to such struggles. One of the Colgate backfield stars forgot himself and was making rushing. He was punished by the sidelines by the umpire but upon the Rochester captain's earnest intercession in his behalf the official reversed his ruling and allowed him to remain in the game. A few minutes later this same man broke loose and scored a touchdown. The goal was kicked and Colgate won the game, 11-0.

"That was the sort of sport, 'Duke' was," said Mr. Smith.

Upon leaving college in 1912 Mr. Koegler joined the sales staff of the Alling & Cury company and remained with the firm until last summer when he entered the book department of Scranton's, being attached to the East Main Street store. His health had been failing for some time however and soon after the New Year he was compelled to drop his work in an effort to regain his health.

A few years after leaving college Mr. Koegler married Miss Olive Arey, daughter of Professor Albert L. Arey, formerly of the Rochester Free Academy. She survives him with a son, Ansel, a daughter, Constance, his mother Mrs. Eila Koegler and two brothers, George and Conrad Koegler. Mrs. Koegler and his two brothers live in New York city. Mr. Koegler was a member of the Rochester chapter of Patapsco fraternity. The funeral tomorrow will be private and the internment will be at Brooklyn.

Mr. Doud, who was prominent in Rochester was well-known to thousands of the residents of this city, retired from active business six years ago. An proprietor of the Franklin house he managed one of the oldest hostleries and, at one time, the leading hotel of this city. It was opened by Mr. Doud on the site of a wine garden, established on the outskirts by a French woman and well-known to the older citizens of Rochester as the first place in the city where illuminating gas was used.

In 1822 the old hotel property was purchased by the Sidney, Lindsell & Curr Company and razed to make way for additions to that store. An auction of its furnishings just prior to the sale attracted many bidders and much of the old-fashioned statuary and other antique things were sought by friends of Mr. Doud. He was a member of the Elm, Knights of Columbus, the Ancient Order of Hibernians and the Red Men.

Funeral services will be held Friday morning at 9:45 o'clock from the home and at 10 o'clock from St. Mary's Church.

J. G. COMERFORD
DIES, AGED 73;
COLORFUL LIFE

One of City's Most Important Realty Operators at Time of Death, He Started Life "Punching" Cattle on Texas Ranch.

James G. Comerford, president of Fahy's Market Inc., and of the Sagamore Hotel, and one of the largest real estate operators in Rochester, died unexpectedly at 11 o'clock last night at his home at 779 East Avenue, aged 73 years. He is survived by his wife Mrs. Mary Louise Comerford; two daughters Miss Mary E. Comerford and Mrs. George T. Sullivan and one son James G. Jr.

Mr. Comerford was taken ill shortly after noon yesterday, while on his way home in his automobile, in East Avenue. His chauffeur stopped the car and asked a traffic officer to get in and come with him so that all speed might he made in taking the stricken man to his residence. At the home the policeman assisted the chauffeur in helping him into the house. Mr. Comerford rallied from the attack, which seemed to be acute indigestion, and by evening was up and about the house, playing cards, listening to the radio and singing. Shortly before 11 o'clock he retired, saying that he would go to his office this morning as usual. Within 20 minutes he was dead.

His death brings to a close one of the most colorful careers connected with the development of this city. Born in Rochester and educated in the First Ward, in which his boyhood home was located, he went to Texas in his youth, when the old West was still full of romance and became a "cowpuncher" on a cattle ranch in that state. Where he learned the elements of the work which in later years was to make him a fortune. After several years on the ranches of Texas Mr. Comerford went to Chicago and entered the packing houses, where he spent several years learning another branch of the meat industry.

Following his Chicago experiences, Mr. Comerford returned to Rochester, still a poor man, and entered the employ of Fahy's Market as a clerk. Up until the time of the death of Mr. Fahy he continued in his capacity as clerk in the market, but after that was put in charge of the business. He was then 45 years old, and according to his own story and that told by friends, just at the beginning of his success in life. During the few years he had accumulated sufficient money to take over the entire business, in which he had started as a clerk.

Interested in real estate, he began operations in that field and gradually accumulated a fortune. He was one of the first operators to enter the East Avenue field, where he made large profits. His fortune was made at a time of life when most men have quit the struggle and settled down to live on their accumulations or a wage. He was one of the first officers of the Community Chest and for several years was treasurer of that organization and a member of the budget committee. He was also for several years a member of the board of directors of the National Bank of Commerce.

He was a member of the Automobile Club of Rochester, Chamber of Commerce, Elks Club, Oak Hill Country Club, Ad Club, Rochester Historical Society, Rochester Yacht Club, Washington Club and the New York State Archeological Society, Morgan Chapter and Fourth Degree Assembly, Knights of Columbus.

ROCHESTER DOCTOR COMMITS SUICIDE IN HOTEL NEAR VERSAILLES, FRANCE; DESPONDENCY CAUSE, RELATIVES SAY

Despondency, induced by disease and loneliness, is thought to have lead to the suicide of Dr. Oscar Pardo, aged 57 years, of 215 Culver Road, in a small hotel at Chatou, near Versailles, France, yesterday. Dr. Pardo, according to a news dispatch from Paris last night, took a large dose of veronal and opened his jugular vein.

A letter found near his body, addressed to Robert B. Wickes of Rochester, stated a cancer in his chest had been pronounced incurable by French physicians, leading him to prefer death to further suffering, according to the foreign dispatch. Dr. Pardo had also been extremely despondent over the death last October of his wife, and had talked of going to Paris and opening his jugular vein.

A brother of Dr. Pardo came here on an Italian Government secret mission, during the World War. The brother later died in Russia.

Dr. Pardo was the husband of the late Mrs. Alice Cogswell Pardo, whose father was the late William Cogswell, an attorney. Mrs. Pardo was the sister of Mrs. Robert C. Wickes, to whose husband Dr. Pardo's death communication was addressed.

After retiring from active medical practice years ago, Dr. Pardo devoted his life to philanthropy and study. For some time, he gave free service to members of the local Italian Colony, especially during the severe influenza epidemic in 1918. At the time of his death yesterday, Dr. Pardo was on the eve of a trip to Russia to engage in independent medical relief work among the poor. He was in France for warmer weather, when asked with his fit of extreme despondency.

Charlotte's Oldest Woman
Dies, Knew Site Of Grave
Of Famous Jumper, Sam Patch

Living at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Thomas Hogan, the old lady was very fond of telling tales of early Rochester and the Charlotte district. Her memory, always keen, held pictures of this city when it was but a village, with a log cabin on the site where the Powers Hotel now stands. It was in this cabin that the first white child in Rochester was born.

She also had memories of the village of Charlotte which in her childhood was a settlement made up of two hotels and a general store, surrounded by dense forests, from which friendly Indians would emerge now and again to trade with the settlers or teach the little girl how to weave baskets. Mrs. Davis at that time made friends with the squaws of the Indian settlement at Horse- ford's landing where she learned bead work.

She is survived by two daughters, Mrs. Doris A. Wallace of Rochester and Mrs. Huguet; one son, Charles A. Davis of Rochester; eight grandchildren and four great-grandchildren. Funeral services will take place Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock from the house. Burial will be made in Charlotte Cemetery.

OLDEST WOMAN IN COUNTY

105, DIES, LOVED BY MANY

Aged Men Recall Her as Teacher; Service Life Keynote.

Miss Elizabeth Jane Kewin, 105 years old, one of Monroe County's oldest women, died Saturday in the Rochester Friendly Home, it became known yesterday.

Many aged men in Rochester remembered her three times from Miss Kewin in the Jarves street school, where she later became principal, serving until 1892 when she left the city to make her home at Bergen. In her last years at Bergen, where she had cared for an invalid sister who died here, she became too ill to care for herself and friends made it possible for her to enter the Rochester Friendly Home. For the last seven years she had occupied a bed in the infirmary, but was strong enough some times to sit in a chair part of the day.

She took pleasure in seeing old friends and in making new ones. Even in her advanced years she had a cheery outlook and took an interest in the life about her. Attendants at the home called her the sunniest and most patient of the residents.

Although Miss Kewin was not certain of her exact age, officials at the Friendly Home said it was established by her friends that she was 105 years old. A Rochester woman fixed Miss Kewin's age by recalling that her mother and Miss Kewin were children together.

Miss Kewin's parents were Matthew and Jane Kewin, who were born on the Jafie street near Mason. The family came to this country and lived at No. 109 Brown street, this city, for a number of years.

Her life was devoted mostly to the service of others, according to those who knew her intimately. As teacher she was remembered as a woman of patient and gentlekindliness who endeared herself to her pupils. Friends spoke of her smiling care of her invalid sister in Bergen later and of her neighborly spirit.

She was a member of the Methodist Church of Bergen and also showed much interest in school affairs. Up to ten years ago her mind was active and in many ways she showed the mental attainments which made her a successful teacher.

Her hobby was flowers, for which she showed a passionate fondness. The little garden before her Bergen home was brilliant with old-fashioned flowers from early spring to late fall.

A wonderful woman and a most lovable character," was the tribute paid Miss Kewin by Rev. Adam Schkelin, of No. 105 1/2 Alexander street, who was her pupil, and by Geo. Wieder of Bergen, of whom she had kept in touch with through the years.

Augustus Henry Harvey died yesterday morning at the family home, No. 21 1/2 Dimmerville avenue, aged 77 years. He leaves his wife, Elizabeth Geo Harvey; a son, Carl R. Harvey; two sisters, Mrs. H. L. Ellis, of Elizabeth, N. J., and Mrs. Frank Hires, of this city. He was a past member of O'Rourke Post and a member of Garfield Post, of Zepplinville, Fla.

CITY BUILDING PIONEER DIES

ISAAC CHRISTIAANSEN

Funeral services for Isaac Christiaansen, pioneer resident of Rochester under whose direction four-story building in the city was constructed, will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home, No. 94 Richmond street. Burial will be made in Mount Hope cemetery.

Mr. Christiaansen died unexpectedly at his home Saturday.

Born in Holland on June 17, 1835, Mr. Christiaansen came to this city with his parents when he was 16 years old. In 1850 the family settled in Richmond street. Mr. Christiaansen aiding his father in the building of the homestead which for many years stood at the corner of Richmond and Alexander streets.

The large Elm streets in the lower part of Richmond street, four of which were blown down in the heavy wind storm which swept the city last month, were planted by Mr. Christiaansen shortly after he moved to the homestead he occupied for more than fifty years.

Mr. Christiaansen, as a contractor, aided in the construction of Anderson Hall at the University of Rochester in 1858 and the present City Hall. He was a close personal friend of the father of the late George Eastman.

The first four-story building in Rochester, constructed on the present site of the sixteen-story Eastman Kodak Company office building in State street, was built under the direction of Mr. Christiaansen and George Eastman shortly after the Eastman firm began to expand. Mr. Eastman was then only a pioneer in the camera manufacturing field.

Mr. Christiaansen, who was also one of the first members of the Rochester Builders' Exchange, was engaged in the construction of several of Rochester's prominent churches. In his later years he was president of a bank and clerical business until his retirement in 1885.

He leaves four sons, Martin J., Abraham J., Isaac A. and Philip L. Christiaansen; a daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Nelson; twelve grandchildren, and twelve great-grandchildren.

The hearers who will serve at Mr. Christiaansen's funeral to-morrow, all grandchildren, will be John Pappas, Norman Christiaansen, Roy White, William Christiaansen, Chester Nelson and Edward Delonge.
The death of John Singer Sargent, recognized as the greatest painter of America has yet produced, yesterday morning at his home in Chelsea, on the Thames, London, was the source of deep regret to hundreds of Rochesterians. This was true, not alone for the pleasure given by his famous canvases in an exhibition at the Memorial Art Gallery at various times, but because of the honor he paid a resident of this city, Judge I. Harmon, whom he characterized as typical of the Anglo-Saxon race in the World War.

Most of the representative portraits painted by the artist have been during recent years at the Memorial Art Gallery. The latest of his works on exhibit there was the "Portrait of a Boy," leased by Mrs. Angas of St. Gaudens. It was here last September simultaneously with the showing in the Grand Central Art Gallery in New York, where the most complete collection of his works ever gathered was on display. Mr. Sargent aided in the collection of that exhibit.

At the time of his being chosen as model for the painter, Judge I. Harmon, now a member of the advertising staff of the Times-Union, was a private in the American Expeditionary Forces in France. Sargent had gone to the French front to sketch some British and American soldiers types for a large canvas to be placed in the Memorial Museum.

His meeting with the artist was described by Harmon in a letter to his mother, part of which is quoted:

"I was walking my post, and a carload of officers, British and American, got out at headquarters. I did not pay any particular attention to the occasion save that one man had an enormous amount of baggage and looked very much different in size than one of the party. About two hours later, around 12:30, this same personage came up and stood near my post against a Mission but, and I noticed that he seemed to keep looking at me steadily.

"Major Starr came along, why by the way, was my old captain, and was stopped by this man. After a little conversation they both came to where I was standing and Major Starr said: Harmon when are you off duty? I told him at 1 o'clock. I thought I was asked about of being a spy or that something dreadful had happened, but in a few seconds I was introduced to the world's greatest portrait painter, John Singer Sargent, who is here getting material for a great picture representing Great Britain's and America's part in the war—or, better—of the Anglo-Saxon race. Mr. Sargent wanted me as a model and I was relieved from guard and was assigned to him.

"After dinner I reported to him in full military equipment and he began his sketches. I was with him two hours that afternoon and he did about twenty pencil sketches, one large watercolor painting and several photographs during the week.

"Mr. Sargent commented on how healthy I looked and said what attracted him was the shape of my head. He remarked I had a splendid head for portrait painting. He took my address and told me he wanted to use me if possible in some other way.

"Now I am going to London to get a new uniform and I hope to see the artist, in any case, after the war."

He was a nephew of Martin B. Anderson, the former president of the University of Rochester, and lived with his uncle. He graduated from the university in 1891.

Before his graduation he was commissioned as first lieutenant of the Nineteenth United States Infantry. He was in active service during the Civil War, resigning in January, 1866, a year after its close.

In 1898 he was promoted to the rank of major in the pay department. His father was stationed in Washington, and later at Atlanta, Savannah and San Francisco. From San Francisco he went to the Philippines in February, 1900. He returned to this country in 1901, but went back to the Philippines before the islands were subdued. RITES TO-MORROW FOR VETERAN CONTRACTOR

A Faithful Public Servant.

Men of the type of Frank V. Reynolds, deputy city comptroller, who died suddenly yesterday, are the mainstays of important, but often uninteresting, functions of government. Their usefulness is the result of an unusual degree of faithfulness, application and exactitude, and their reward generally is little more than the consciousness of doing one's duty faithfully and without deviation. No spectacular honors are theirs, none of the excitement of political struggle, but without them those who receive the honors, those who have the excitement of political struggle and recognition, could not properly function.

Mr. Reynolds served in the city comptroller's office more than half a century, as its chief clerk. He established the system of bookkeeping now in use there; he prepared the statistics for the comptroller's annual report and kept unceasing watch that, without official authorization, departments did not exceed or deviate from their official allowances. He performed many other duties that did not bring him much in the public eye, but that were well appreciated by those who knew him in official circles.

To care and exactitude in the performance of his official duties he added an unfailing courtesy and readiness to give information about the city's financial affairs that was legitimately asked, a quality not always associated with his type of position.

His place will be difficult to fill.

MORALLY BENEVOLENT

Dr. Frederick M. Millener.

Dr. Frederick M. Millener, a nationally-known physician and surgeon, formerly of Buffalo, and Omaha, Neb., a native of this city, died Thursday at the home of his brother in Altoona, Ia.

Dr. Millener was for years a deep student of electricity and was known for his contributions to radio and numerous electrical inventions. He was credited with being the first to receive radio messages from a moving train and successfully operated a railroad power car from the control. Dr. Millener some years ago led a movement to prevent electricians from attempting to obtain signals from the planet Mars.

Dr. Millener was a direct descendant of Alexander H. Millener, who served in the Revolution at the age of 16 years and is known in history as Washington's drummer boy, and saw the first American flag raised at Fort Schuyler, now the home of his brother.

It is expected that Dr. Millener's body will be brought to Rochester for burial in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

“Rev. M. Martin was president of the board of examining chaplains of the diocese through the latter years of his life. Two years ago he published a volume, “The Great Christian Essentials,” in which he sums up a belief that he not only held theoretically, but lived. His sympathetic, affectionate nature endeared him to his brother clergy and we shall miss his genial and kindly presence.”

John B. Forest, Civil War veteran and well known resident of Rochester, died at his home, 22 Hyde Park yesterday afternoon. Born at Assumpinia, Canada, December 6, 1846, he came to Rochester at the age of 18 and enlisted in Company F, 31st Regiment, New York Volunteer Infantry three years later.

NOTED AUTHOR PASSES AWAY IN THE WEST

Herbert Quick, Father of Mrs. Raymond N. Ball, Dies Following Address at the University of Missouri.

Herbert Quick, of Berkeley Springs, W. Va., author, editor and economist, who was well known to Rochesterians, died unexpectedly, Friday in Columbus, Ohio, aged 64 years. Quick came as the result of a heart attack, following an address, made at the request of the wishes of physicians, at a dinner which closed Journalism Week at the University of Missouri. He was taken to a hospital at the conclusion of his address and died during the night.

Mr. Quick, who was the father of Mrs. Raymond N. Ball of 202 Van Buren Street, was a noted political economist, who died at Columbus, Ohio, following a heart attack. His last visit to Rochester was in October 26, 1925, when he made an address to the City Club of Rochester in the Powers Hotel.

JOHN H. QUICK
FUNERAL HELD IN SYRACUSE

Services for Novel and Noted Political Economist Held at Oakwood Chapel — Distinguished Men Act as Bearers.

Funeral services for John Herbert Quick, famous novelist, editor of Farm and Fireside, and noted political economist, who died at Columbus, Ohio, were held at Oakwood Chapel, Saturday, yesterday afternoon. Mr. Quick was the father of Mrs. Raymond N. Ball, wife of the Treasurer of the University of Rochester.

Chancellors Charles Wesley Finley of the University and Syracuse officiated at the service and friends of Mr. Quick from Berkeley Springs, W. Va., his home, and Washington, D. C., were present. Burial was in Oakwood Cemetery.

His funeral corteggia included: Judge Lobell, Chairman of the Federal Farm Loan Board at Washington, D. C.; Judge Eimer L. Landis, National Loan Commissioner; H. D. Culver, Washington, D. C.; C. H. Thompson, President of the Federal Loan Board, O. Loan Bank and Mr. Robinson, of Springfield, Active bearers were: Congressman Mayer Jacobson, of Rochester, Frank Gambel, editor of the Rochester Times-Union; H. Van W. Glenn Kell and D. H. Gist, all of Rochester.

Showed Place Held:

The following editorial in the New York Times is interesting.

"Slavery a Creator" shows the place that Mr. Quick held.

The late Horace Quick seems to have been "capable of tout." He was school teacher, lawyer, journalist, politician, prosecutor, bondholder, manufacturer, editor, the Federal Farm Bureau, Red Cross executive in the Far East, a social and delightful and a man of good words, gentlemen. These were among his avocations.

"If I am a better judge of the life of the New World, I am an inferior judge of the life of the Old World."

"I am only a writer, I am a reader, and I have found out something new." Gay, active, voluntarily successful, he maintained that in his capacity as an author, he had as a child, left his victim superior, as a rule, to their fellows. As a boy he wanted to be a war correspondent and to go to West Point for military training and the modern language. His engineering infirmity, about which he never whined or sighed, prevented. He thanked the insurance engineer who, he said: "I am a man of the day, I am a man of the day, I am a man of the day." They had kept him from being a professional ballplayer or a professional player or a professional player. But he was also a sympathetic, cheerful, steady will, keen interest in many things. The compensation of the age, the high gift of imagination. He didn't find his vocation until late. He was 41 when his first book was published: more than 60 when "Vandemar's Folk" followed, the next new year's day." He made his fame. In these he put flesh upon the day dreams of the literature of the United States. It's the history of the city, the settlement, the early neighborhood.

H. I. Sunderlin Dies; Stricken with Apoplexy

H. I. Sunderlin, vice-president of the Rochester Jewelry Company at 350 Main street, east, was stricken with apoplexy shortly after he went to the store at 9 o'clock this morning. He died a few moments later, without regaining consciousness, at the Homeopathic Hospital.

Last night Mr. Sunderlin seemed in his usual good health and was at work at his regular hour this morning in good spirits. Shortly after he entered the store he climbed a small flight of stairs to the office balcony and but a few seconds after was found by an employee lying on the floor unconscious. The ambulance was summoned and he was rushed to the hospital where every effort to restore him was without avail.

Mr. Sunderlin was born Nov. 17, 1874, at 49 Plymouth avenue north, where he resided his entire life, being one of the few constant residents of that neighborhood. He was educated in the public schools of Rochester and following the completion of his schooling entered the Sunderlin Jewelry Company, where he remained up to the time of his death. He had been vice-president of the company for the last 15 years.

Mr. Sunderlin was serving on the present federal grand jury. He was a member of the Rochester Athletics Club and member of the Rochester Retail Jewelers' Association. He is survived by his brother, Charles I. Sunderlin. Notice of funeral arrangements will be made later.

Pioneer At Charlotte

The death of Maria Augusta Abrams occurred at her home on the Latta road on Tuesday morning. She had been confined to her bed for more than a year, which was her first severe illness. Mrs. Abrams was born on the farm now owned by Clarence S. Lunt in Greece, Oct. 30, 1836. She was the daughter of the late George C. and Frances Mann Latta, both of whom belonged to the pioneer families of Charlotte. Samuel Latta, an older brother of George C. Latta, was the first customs officer of the port of Genesee, receiving his certificate from President Jefferson.

Mr. Mann settled here in 1827. Mrs. Abrams attended school in the small brick building that stood on Stuteon street. When the plank road from Rochester to Charlotte proved a failure financially, her father purchased the hotel at the corner of Lake Avenue and Latta road, which had been erected by the road company, and moved his family there, converting it into a private residence. They resided there until after his death in 1870, when they moved to a farm on Latta road, on the outskirts of the village.

On April 25, 1858, Maria A. Latta was united in marriage to Benjamin S. Abrams of Charlotte, formerly of Nepass, Genesee, and they moved to Hilton where they resided six years. With the exception of these few years, all of Mrs. Abrams' life has been spent here. She was of a social disposition and was known to many as "Aunt B." She was naturally very cheerful and this quality she displayed to a wonderful degree all through her illness.

From a hamlet she lived to see this place become a ward of Rochester. The days of the old horse-drawn trolley have become the days of the automobile, the trolley and the airplane. Thoughts are not only transmitted by the written word, but by the telephone and the radio.

Mrs. Abrams is survived by a sister, Mrs. A. J. Mulligan of Henry; a brother, Menuel L. Latta of this city; six nieces, Mrs. May Latta Stern, Mrs. Frances Partridge, Mrs. George O. Krueger, Mrs. Fred Slater, all of this city; Mrs. W. E. Sturdivant of Haddonfield, N. J., and Miss Catherine Mulligan of Albany; three nephews, George L. Barrus of this city, G. Emmett Mulligan of Albany, and A. Roger Mulligan of Syracuse.

F. B. Callister, Hardware Man Dies at Home

Was Prominent in Church and Political Life of Rochester—Served for Four Years as Excise Commissioner.

Frank B. Callister, for 48 years engaged in the hardware and stove business in this city, died early this morning at his home at 797-1 2 St. Paul boulevard, Irondequoit, aged 64 years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Cornelia S. Callister; one sister, Mrs. Mary Doyle; one brother, William J. Callister, and one niece, Harold F. Callister.

Mr. Callister was born in Rochester, Jan. 13, 1881, and received his education in the schools of this city. On Sept. 23, 1888, he married Miss Cornelia Schuller. Some 40 years ago he entered the business world with the Tully Stove Company in Exchange street. He later succeeded Mr. Tully in that business and then moved to 151 Main street west, where he maintained a business for 25 years. In 1912 he bought the building at 151 Main street west and went into business with his son under the firm name of F. B. Callister & Son.

Mr. Callister was active in politics throughout his life and was a staunch Republican, serving as a member of the Sixth ward committee for many years. On Nov. 1, 1916, he was appointed excise commissioner for Monroe county and served in that capacity until March 1, 1919, with offices in the Elwanger & Barry building. He was known to hundreds of Rochesterians as a good friend. For many years he served as announcer at White City field days. He was a 32nd degree Mason, a member of General Vails Lodge, F. and A. M., a member of Rochester Consistory, Damascus Temple, Shriner's Elks Protective, Knights of Pythias and Brick Presbyterian Church, where he served as church librarian for 20 years.

Funeral services will take place from the home at 2:30 o'clock Saturday afternoon.
The funeral of Mrs. Sarah McLouth Todd, widow of Asahel Todd, was held at her home, No. 19 Buckingham Street, at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Rev. William Wallace Rose, minister of the First Universalist Church, officiated. Grandchildren of Mrs. Todd acted as bearers. Burial took place in Riverside Cemetery.

Mrs. Todd was born in Walworth April 16, 1832. Although she was past ninety-three years of age at the time of her death she retained her faculties in a remarkable degree almost to the end. She was a woman of unusual intelligence and mental vigor, took a keen interest in all that went on about her and was thoroughly posted on the news of the day. She frequently contributed verses and articles to the Democrat and Chronicle, many of which appeared in the department of Over the Peninsula. Her hand-writing was clean and legible, and all the little niceties of punctuation and capitalization were carefully observed.

The reproduction herewith of a short poem she wrote last Thanksgiving Day for members of her family is an exact facsimile of the original manuscript and gives a fair illustration of her unusual literary talent and also of her firm penmanship. Her death will be deeply mourned not only among the immediate circle of her relatives, but also among a wide circle of friends and acquaintances.

The early married life of Mr. and Mrs. Todd was spent in Pultneyville. They moved to Rochester some thirty years ago. Mr. Todd died about nine years ago. Mrs. Todd is survived by three children, Miss Ellen Laura Todd, George W. Todd and Libbey M. Todd, all of Rochester; one brother, John McLouth, of Walworth; eight grandchildren, Walter L. Todd, George L. Todd, Donald S. Todd, Conway L. Todd, A. Richard Todd, Margaret M. Todd, Sarah M. Todd and Ellen Laura Todd; and two great-grandchildren, John H. Todd and Joelyn Todd.

The funeral of Mrs. M. O. Goings, great-granddaughter of George Cuyler, a signer of the declaration of Independence, were held in Wellsville, Pa. Sunday. She was born in Rochester and spent her early childhood here. She died in Philadelphia, in April 1920, following a cerebral hemorrhage at sea on the steamer Provincetown.

Mrs. Goings was the daughter of an army officer and passed her childhood in the West and Southwest. She was a cousin of Thomas P. Bayard, the first American ambassador to Great Britain, and a niece of David Wilmore, a colleague of Union, Sumner and Lincoln. Her father fought in the Union army and her husband and brother were officers in the World War.

Mrs. Goings was a member of the Pen and Brush Club in New York, and her literary work included several children's books, magazine articles and collaboration with her husband in a recently published biography of David Wilmore.

Mrs. Winifred Overton White of 20 Birch Crescent, a niece, attended the funeral services.

Thanksgiving.

'Twas Thanksgiving, a joyful day,
Plowed down through years passed away;
As all who live here, joy and know;
In other lands has longed for it.
Kind fortune sought the Pilgrims here,
Searching for homes all free from fear;
Generations to bless - freedom is ours,
In homes secure from tyrant's power.

Very hard their lot, very brave their hands;
Informed, determined, they plied their toils;
Never forget, while live you may,
Grateful to be on Thanksgiving Day.
Funeral Services For Mrs. Todd Held
From Late Home

Funeral services for Mrs. Sarah McLouth Todd, other than George W. and Libanus Todd, who died late Friday afternoon at her home at 19 Buckingham street, took place this afternoon at 2 o'clock from the home. The Rev. William Wallace, First Universalist Church officiated. Four of the bearers for Mrs. Todd were her grandchildren, namely, Walter L. Todd, Conway L. Todd, Donald F. Todd and George L. Todd. Burial was made in Riverside Cemetery.

Mrs. Todd, who was 53 on April 16, was born in Walworth, and was educated in that town. She later moved to Spencerport and, for a time, lived in Pittsford. Her husband was the late Asahel A. Todd. She had lived in this city for somewhat more than 43 years, although she has been in invalid for several years, kept a constant and keen interest in current events and happenings in and about Rochester. With a brilliant mind and possessed of a quick sense of humor, she was a steady contributor to newspapers and many of her friends read with pleasure the humorous little verses and clever contributions. Up to but a few days before her death, she manifested the same eager interest in the news of Rochester and the world.

Mrs. Todd died survived by her two sons, one daughter, Miss Ellen Todd; eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

LIFE COVERED
EARLY HISTORY OF AMERICA

Mrs. Miriam M. Freeman
Only Surviving Daughter of Man Who Figured in William Lyon McKenzie Uprising

Mrs. Miriam M. Freeman, of the late Zenas Freeman of Hamilton, Canada, died after a long illness, yesterday morning at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Arvilla M. Lottridge, 167 Alexander street, this city.

Mrs. Freeman was the only surviving daughter of the late Philip Triller of Trafalgar, Canada. Her ancestors came to this country in the first ship that sailed for Philadelphia. They settled in Essex county, New Jersey, and her grandfather, Mr. Young, owned at one time, 200 acres of land, where Jersey City now stands. Her great-grandfather enlisted in the War of 1776, and witnessed the surrender of the sword by Cornwallis, to George Washington. He, with his family and others, moved to Canada in 1816. This was a hazardous journey by covered wagons. They carried with them a trunk in which all the money of the whole company was placed, each man taking his turn to guard it on the journey. This company settled between Grimsby and Toronto, near the shores of Lake Ontario, each taking up a large tract of land. Mr. Triller settled in Trafalgar, near the Sixteen Hills, where he built a large colonial home. Mr. Triller was also an officer in the War of 1812. A piece of the crimson silk sash which he wore at that time is preserved by the family. When the Rebellion of 1837 started, he was a sympathizer of the great leader, William Lyon Mackenzie, for whose capture, dead or alive, the government had offered a large re-ward. One night, hastily pursued by the soldiers, William Lyon Mackenzie died to Mr. Triller's home. The officers in pursuit arrived on the scene, evening, but were so graciously received by the oldest daughter, who was considered very beautiful, that they forgot to search the house, and the life of Mackenzie was saved. Mr. Mackenzie donned women's attire, and with Mr. Triller's assistance escaped to friends at Niagara.

The present Premier of Canada, McKenzie King, is a grandson of William Lyon Mackenzie. Premier King recently visited the Triller homestead. This historic house is more than a century old, and is still in a good state of preservation. Mrs. Freeman was born, grew to maturity, and was married in this home. She was deeply interested in the early mission work that developed into what is now the South Congregational Church. For some time she was a member of the Monroe Avenue Methodist church. For 32 years she had been invalid, and unable to engage in active work, but has always maintained her deep interest in the church and all good works, and was a woman of splendid Christian character. Her mind was very active and vigorous to the last. She was a loyal and devoted member of the enthusiastic followers of the American Revolution.

She is survived by three children, Delmar Clarkson Freeman, of Franklin, Pa., Herbert P. Freeman of this city, and Mrs. Arvilla M. Lottridge of 167 Alexander street, with whom she has been living at home. Four grandchildren, Harry D. Freeman of Vancouver, B. C., Chester D. Freeman of Chicago, Ill., Herbert Stanley and Walter Freeman of this city and two great grandchildren.
MISS ELLA E. SEE, ARTIST AND TEACHER BELOVED BY THOUSANDS, DIES FOLLOWING BRIEF ILLNESS

MISS ELLA E. SEE.

graduation, she studied at Columb.

dia, University, and at the summer school for artists in Gloucester, Mass.

In New York City she was a pupil of such instructors as Dow, Chase and Du Mond. In 1886 she became an instructor at the West High School, a position she had held ably since that time.

Since 1882 she had been a member of the board of control of the Rochester Art School. She was also a member of the Corner Club and of the Women's City Club.

Speaking of her work as an artist, Miss Gertrude H. Kendall, director of Memorial Art Gallery, said that Miss See was one of the outstanding artists of Rochester, with a personality and talent that was most interesting to those who knew her. She had traveled abroad and in the West, extensively, and this fact influenced her work to a marked degree. She was not content to adopt one style or mode of expression, but her work of different periods reveals a constant progression, a striving to improve and to approach perfection. Her early work was strongly marked by impressionism, her later pictures being more in the direction of realism. Her last, an Oregon canyon scene recently exhibited, was a daring bit of color work that attracted much admiring comment.

Because of her long association with Miss See and her intimate knowledge of the artist's achievements, Miss Herdle was deeply affected by the news of her friend's sudden passing. She spoke particularly of the spirit of service and self-sacrifice that marked Miss

See's career, saying that in her work she always sought to hurt in mind a wish to do something that would be helpful to the public.

So far as known, Miss See left no immediate relatives in Rochester. A cousin, Charles See of Michigan, who is visiting in this city, took charge of funeral arrangements.

Paintings Nearly Finished.

Principal William M. Benny, of West High School spoke highly of Miss See's work as a teacher and remarked feelingly on the fact in the series of mural paintings, "The Story of the Book," which Miss See was executing in one of the corridors, had been completed with the exception of the dedication tablet. There are now six completed paintings, the dedication tablet being the seventh and last of the series. Professor Benny said he could not be expected to set down what might be done about having the series completed by another artist. Miss See had long been in the midst of designing the final painting when overtaken by fatal illness. She had devoted many hours in the task, which will stand as a permanent reminder of her high and selfless service to West High School.

Funeral services will be conducted behind closed doors at 2 o'clock inst, the Hope Chapel. Burial will be in Mt.
Hope Cemetery.

The body has been removed to Jeffrey's undertaking rooms, 52 Chestnut Street.

For the past 40 years he had been in the retail coal business with offices in the Reynolds Arcade.

JOSEPH A. KIRBY, PROMINENT LAWYER, DIES IN BATAVIA.

Attorney Joseph A. Kirby of Rochester died yesterday morning at 85 Jerome's Hospital, Batavia, where he was taken several weeks ago. An affection of the throat, which resulted from paralysis of the larynx, contributed largely to his death.

Beginning his career as a court stenographer in the office of Judge Buffalo, Mr. Kirby learned enough law in his court reporting and by outside study to qualify him for admission to the bar. At one time he was associated in the practice of law in this city with John J. Moloney and Charles R. Bostwick, and both those lawyers have been witnesses to his soundness and ability. He later was a member of the firm of Kirby & Millner, until Attorney John A. Millner left Rochester to act as counsel for a national organization. Since that time he has practiced alone.

He leaves a wife, Mrs. Frances A. Kirby, Mr. and Mrs. Kirby lived at 15 Cumberland Street.

Harold P. Brewster, who has just passed on,
was a man of positive worth to Rochester.

to the prosperity which is the foundation for the city's many other distinguishing qualities, but, like so many other successful Rochester business men, he also gave positive civic service to the community.

His forceful personality found effective ex-the war, in which he was both a leader and a determined worker. As director of the Rochester campaign to add fifty thousand dollars

Ray K. Savage Killed In Trolley-Auto Crash

Two Others Seriously Hurt; Girl May Die

Jefferson Junior High Principal Accident Victim at Marsh Road Crossing—Funeral Services at Lake Avenue Church Tomorrow—John D.
Sullivan and Daughter Injured.

Ray K. Savage, 46, of 36 Riverside street, principal of Jefferson Junior High School, was instantly killed; Eleanor Sul-livian, 16, daughter of John D. Sullivan, of 902 Harvard street, Rochester, attorney, was probably fatally hurt, and Mr. Sullivan was badly cut and bruised shortly before 2:30 o'clock yestterday afternoon, when the sedan in which they were riding, and which was driven by Mr. Sullivan, was struck by a westbound Rochester & Eastern trolley car at the Marsh road crossing, a mile east of Pittsford.

Miss Sullivan, who is a sophomore at Columbia Preparatory School, lies at the Highland Hospital today with a fractured skull and serious cuts and bruises. Little hope is held for her recovery.

According to report the trolley car struck the rear end of the sedan, throwing it completely around and knocking the body off the chassis. Mr. Savage, who was riding in the back seat, was dropped directly onto the tracks in front of the trolley car. He believed fatally injured, the car and dragged some 300 feet before the trolley, in which the controller and the auxiliary air tank had been broken, could be brought to a stop. When picked up he was terribly crushed and his legs had been severed from his body. Mr. Sullivan and his daughter were riding in the front seat.
He was thrown clear of the wreckage and suffered cuts and bruises.
His daughter was crushed in the wreckage of the automobile.

Stopped Before Accident.

According to Motorman James Parks, conductor William Simmons, both of Canandaigua, passengers on the car and other wit-esses interviewed shortly after the ex-K.N. Hadsell, of the New York State Railways, the automobile appeared to have been stopped at one side of the crossing before the accident. The Marsh road is being used as a detour around repairs now in progress on

Parks reports that he saw the automobile standing near the tracks; saw it start and lunge forward, as though it were being started in high gear. He says that he blew his horn, but the momentum carried it forward into the machine. The crash snapped off the controller, and also shut off auxiliary air tank, thus shutting off more power for the brakes.

The crash, for some quarter of a mile about the district, attracted many persons to the scene. Passengers and others on the car were badly shaken up and interurban motor traffic was held up for more than an hour. The trolley was towed into Rochester and passengers transferred to another car at the city limits. The party had left Rochester, en route for Colgate University, at Hamilton, where Mr. Savage and his guardian, Edith, had been attending commencement exercises, where a member of the family was graduating.

Hundreds Shocked at News.

News of the accident spread rapidly through the city, announcement of it going to many homes over the radio, from Lake Avenue Baptist Church, where Dr. Albert W. Beaven, Mr. Savage's pastor, was giving his sermon. Earlier, the information had been carried over the telephone to many of the teachers and educational workers of Rochester. It came as a great shock to his friends, several of his teachers were prostrated by the news, and in two cases the aid of a physician was summoned.

Speaking of the death of Mr. Savage, the Rev. Dr. Beaven said: "This has been a great shock to me. He was one of the fairest chaps I have known. He was doing great work in Jefferson Junior High School and I know that Rochester has lost one of its really great citizens."

Superintendent of Schools Herbert S. Weet when advised of the tragedy, said: "What a sad loss. He was one of our ablest men as shown by the fact he was promoted to the principalship of one of our junior high schools, one of the most important posts in our entire system. I had the complete confidence of all with whom he came in contact. It is a striking shock to all who knew him personally or were acquainted with his work as an educator."

Mr. Savage was a man who took his work seriously. During the long period of years when he was principal of Jefferson Junior High School, after his graduation from the University of Rochester in 1903, he was continually improving his educational equipment and preparing himself for better and more responsible work.

Not only did he take courses at Columbia during the summer for a number of years, earning the degree of master of arts, but he also worked for a time in the auditing department of one of Rochester's largest business organizations to acquire first-hand knowledge of the relation of education to practical business requirements.

Thus equipped, he was the logical choice in 1919 as principal of Jefferson Junior High School. His work as an executive and teacher justified his selection for this responsible position. Recognition of his standing in this comparatively new field was shown by the invitation to conduct courses in junior high school administration at the summer school of Johns Hopkins University. He did this for two years and was to have conducted a similar course for the University of Rochester this summer.

Mr. Savage was 46 years old, with many years of usefulness before him, when he was killed in the accident yesterday. The automobile in which he was a passenger was being hit by an interurban car. His death is a loss to the Rochester school system and the community, as well as a source of grief to his relatives and numerous friends.
Hundreds Pay Tribute To Ray K. Savage

Services at Lake Avenue Baptist Ch.

Dr. A. W. Beaven Pays High Tribute to Educator Whose Tragic Death Sunday Shocked Entire Community.

Educators, professional and business men and women, and pupils of Jefferson Junior High School had made their tasks this morning to pay their last tribute to the memory of Ray K. Savage, principal of Jefferson Junior High, whose tragic death Sunday afternoon shocked the entire community.

Lake Avenue Baptist Church, in which the services were held, were crowded to the doors, there being at least 2,000 men, women and children present. It was a gathering which showed the wide influence exerted by the man who was killed in an automobile in which he was riding was struck by a Rochester and Eastern trolley at March crossing.

Members of the Board of Education, headed by President Charles F. Wray; public school executives, teachers in Jefferson Junior High as well as in the other schools; several members of the class of 1903; University of Rochester of which Mr. Savage was a member; members of the various church boards of Lake Avenue Baptist, all these were present with hundreds of others whose lives Mr. Savage had touched in some way or another during his life.

Life Makes Challenge.

The list of those present was not emphasized in the services, rather did the Rev. A. W. Beaven, the pastor, bring out the challenge to the school authorities and children to carry on the work which Mr. Savage had started. Mr. Beaven's tribute to Mr. Savage was in part as follows:

"Here we are because we loved him. His inspiration he imparted to the souls of our children. He lifted their vision to something finer. The people of the Ninth and Tenth wards, the people of the entire city are indebted to him. He has placed the stamp of fine personality and sterling leadership on our boys and girls.

"Ray Savage was the kind of a fine, clean-upstanding citizen that makes the world worth living in. Out of some of his loss comes a bequest to these boys and girls, the graduating class of Jefferson Junior High, whose lives will hold problems and temptations. God will help them to do what he thought they were going to be good citizens of a great nation.

"Life is not measured by quantity, but by quality. Thank God for Ray Savage. He has closed his books to open them over there. His life is a challenge to those associated with him."

Services Simple.

The services at the church were simple as were those conducted at the home at 36 Riverside street prior to the church gathering. Norman Malm, at the organ, played appropriate hymns as the body was carried into and out of the church.

At the conclusion of the service, members of the graduating class at Jefferson Junior High School—the girls dressed in their graduation costumes—formed an escort through which the body was carried to the hearse.

The bearers were Herbert E. West, superintendent of schools; William E. Hawley, principal of Monroe Junior High; Theodore A. Zornow, principal of Madison Junior High; George W. Cooper, principal of Theodore Roosevelt School; Raymond C. Koepke, superintendent of the Board of Education; and Arthur H. N. Rogers, supervisor of Industries art at Jefferson Junior High School—all closely associated with Mr. Savage in school work.

Michael J. Zimmerman, 1920

In the death of Michael J. Zimmerman, Deputy Chief of Police, the city of Rochester suffers the loss of a faithful public servant and the Rochester Police Department an officer whose presence was an inspiration to the members of the force.

"Big Mike" Zimmerman gave the best years of his active life to the service of Rochester. He was utterly without fear, with a fine sense of discipline and of the dignity of his position. Yet he was one of the most companionable of men, a type of policeman who could be friendly without inviting familiarity or contempt for law enforcement. From the time he joined the force until illness obliged him to retire, he inspired a wholesome respect for the law, as well as a spirit of fidelity and confidence in the strength of the law.

Departure from this life of Deputy Chief Zimmerman will not disrupt the Police Department, for many capable men remain to carry on the work to which he devoted his life. But it is not exceeding the truth to say that as a result of his conscientious labors and his spirit of service, the Rochester Police Department is better able to fulfill its part in the difficult business of upholding the law and safeguarding the citizens.

The platoon of police and the band escorted the procession to Driving Park avenue where the mounted squad and the 70 members of the Police Department were dispersed while the cortege moved on to Holy Sepulchre Cemetery where the interment took place. For many years Miss O'Laughlin served as assistant organist at St. Patrick's Cathedral. Aside from the reputation she enjoyed as an accomplished musician, she was noted for her charitable work and during her spare time she found pleasure in helping the distress of the more unfortunate. She was well known to the members of the cathedral and was held in high regard by officials as well as inmates at the state school through her long connection with the institution. She was a member of several musical societies, including the Society of St. Patrick's Cathedral.

She leaves two brothers, William L. O'Laughlin of Buffalo and John V. O'Laughlin of Rochester, and three nieces and two nephews.

The funeral will take place tomorrow morning at 8:30 o'clock from the home and at 10 o'clock from Holy Family Church. Burial will be made in the family lot in Holy Sepulchre Cemetery.

MANY AT FUNERAL

Associates in Educational Field Find a Call on His Work.

Funeral services for Clinton E. Kellogg, principal of Washington Junior High School, were conducted yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock from his late home, No. 76 Genesee street. An oubury, prayer, and benediction were delivered by Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D.D., minister of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, of which Mr. Kellogg was an associate member.

Dr. Beaven spoke of the exemplary life of Mr. Kellogg, his work with children and for the community, his love, of nature, and the inspiration his life had been to all who knew him. He said that Mr. Kellogg had died in the flower of his life work, the fruits of which could not reach maturity for years to come. The minister declared that Mr. Kellogg had been a big man—that his outlook on life had been big, wholesome and constructive, and that no one who knew him could ever forget the quiet forcefulness of his personality. Dr. Beaven announced Mr. Kellogg's associates in Washington Junior High School that part of the immortality of his work depended upon how well they carried on in the spirit which he had shown and in the way he had set out for them.

Faced Death Courteously.

During the course of his remarks, Dr. Beaven spoke of the relationship that had existed between Mr. Kellogg and Ray R. Savage, who was killed in an automobile accident in June. For years, he said, that these two men not only had been neighbors and associated in school work, setting a high standard of achievement, but that they had been like devoted brothers. Tragically, he said, had occurred the passing of Mr. Savage, but the passing of Mr. Kellogg was no less incomprehensible.

By Beaven—Praising the high purpose with which Mr. Kellogg for years had faced death, knowing that it was coming, and setting things in order so that when the end came, he would be like a traveler who, having prepared for a long journey, takes the long road, and as he turns the head waves a cheery goodbye. This brave fight, the minister said, was a reflection of the characteristic attitude of Mr. Kellogg in life—to meet every crisis with courage and confidence.

Burial was made on a knoll in Riverside cemetery only a few feet from the grave of Mr. Savage, so that these two men, who had been friends and neighbors in life, are not so far separated in death. At the request of Mrs. Kellogg, Mr. Savage's grave had been covered with some of the flowers sent for Mr. Kellogg, of which there were great quantities.

Many Associates Present.

Every school principal who had returned from vacation, attended the funeral. The teaching staffs of Washington and Jefferson Junior High Schools were well represented, and there was a good representation of the teachers from the other junior high schools, and from the elementary schools.

The bearers were Jackson Gallop, who succeeded Mr. Kellogg as principal of Concord School No. 18; Susie H. Smith, principal of Longfellow School No. 26; William E. Hawley, principal of Monroe Junior High School, Mark W. War, principal of Henry Lord School No. 20; R. Park Parkhill, member of the teaching staff at Washington Junior High School, recently appointed principal of Seward School No. 19; and R. L. Butterfield, principal of Charlotte High School, and president of the Rochester Teachers' Association, of which Mr. Kellogg was a former president.

The Board of Education was represented at the services by James P. Ruffey, and Mrs. Henry G. Davenport; the central office of the Board of Education by Joseph F. O'Flannery, assistant superintendent; J. Sannaty Mullan, secretary to the board, and Miss Mabel Simpson, director of kindergartens and elementary grades.

The New York State Teachers' Association in which Mr. Kellogg had been active, was represented by Richard A. Sewell, secretary. Herbert S. West, superintendent of schools, is out of town and could not return for the services.

MISS FRINKE, LONG IN MUSIC, IS DEAD

Was Secretary of Festival Chorus Fifteen Years.

FRANZ FRINKE.

Musical people throughout the city, as well as personal friends, were shocked Sunday by the death of Miss Frieda E. Frinke, at her home, No. 320 Seward street. For about fifteen years, since its formation, she had been secretary and treasurer of the Festival Chorus. Before that she was secretary of the old Tuesday Musicale. Beginning in early youth her activity in musical circles, Miss Frinke maintained it until her death. For some time she was director of music in the Mark's Lutheran Church and for eighteen years was secretary to Charles P. Huyler, teacher of music.

Observe persons and others whom she helped to success knew her for her high qualities. It was said yesterday by one who knew her intimately that her private charities and unselfish acts for others would never be known. Two groups have special reason to remember her—those who needed at some time the necessities of life, and others who, although chafed and fed, longed to cultivate musical talents. She helped young persons working for scholarships or otherwise struggling for a musical education. Most all of her strictly musical work was done without pay.

Miss Frinke was born in Brooklyn in 1852. She came with her parents to Rochester in 1853. Her interest in the city's musical life, since that time, had never ceased.

She leaves her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Henry Frinke. The funeral will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at St. Mark's Lutheran Church. Rev. C. A. Beekley, minister, will officiate.
E. J. Esser Dies While at Theater
Former Shoe Merchant
Apparantly in Good Health until Moment of Death; Active in K. of C.

Emil J. Esser, for a number of years one of the leading shoe merchants of the city, died suddenly while witnessing a performance in Victoria Theater last night. Mr. Esser was seen to topple forward in his seat, and was carried to the theater lobby. An ambulance was summoned. He was pronounced dead on its arrival.

Corner David Alwater was notified and ordered the body removed to the Morgue, where he will conduct an autopsy today to determine the cause of death. Mr. Esser had been in apparently good health and his death was most unexpected.

Born in Erie, Pa., and came to this city 45 years ago, where he found employment with the shoe firm of Gould, Lee & Edge. After working there for a period of 10 years, he set up in business for himself at 24 State Street.

When business began to move up Main Street East, the firm moved from State Street to 143 Main Street East and later to 155 Main Street East, where he continued, until he retired two years ago.

In 1883 he married Catherine Fitzgerald in St. Bridget's Church. She survives him with three children, Rev. E. J. Esser of Trumansburg, Miss Ann Esser of Pittsford and Mrs. Carl Loewenguth of this city. He also leaves three sisters, Mrs. Georrg F. Shantz, Mrs. Katherine Fuhrman and Miss Emma Dunara, and a brother, Martin Esser, all of Erie, Pa.

He was a charter member of Rochester Council, Knights of Columbus, and served that organization as treasurer for a number of years. He was a fourth degree member of that order. He was also a member of the old First Separate Company, National Guard, and the Holy Name Society of Blessed Sacrament Church.

Death Takes Man Long in Button Trade
John S. Bingeman Expires Suddenly in Theater; Was Born in Canada and Came Here To Enter Business

John S. Bingeman, known through the country as a jobber and importer of buttons, and an early settler of this city, died suddenly last night while attending a theater. Mr. Bingeman was a pioneer of the button industry in this city. He was born in Brant, Ont., and acquired his early education in that place and learned the button trade.

He came to this city in 1847 and entered into a partnership with M. B. Shantz, forming the company of M. B. Shantz & Company, which is now the Rochester Button Company. He remained a member of this firm until 1891, when he sold his interest and became sales manager for the German-American Button Company, a firm that was organized by General Noyes.

He acted in that capacity until 1874, when he organized the firm of Bingeman & Baxter, his partner being Major H. Baxter, who for a number of years had been associated with M. B. Shantz & Company. From the beginning this firm prospered and conducted one of the most extensive importing businesses in this line in the country.

In April, 1881, Mr. Bingeman married Miss Frances L. Davidson of Michigan, Mr. Bingeman continued with this firm until 1918, when he retired from active business owing to ill health.

Associated with Son.

About two years ago he again took up active business and became associated with his son, E. Russell Bingeman, in the button business, forming the firm of E. R. Bingeman & Company. Mr. Bingeman was named president of this firm and served in that capacity at the time of his death.

He was a member of Central Presbyterian Church since he came to this city and served as a member of the board of trustees of that church for a number of years. He was also a life member of the Oak Country Club. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Frances L. Bingeman; one daughter, Miss Alice R. Bingeman, who is well known in society and Horse Show circles, being one of the exhibitors of the Rochester Horse Show at Forest Park last week; one son, E. Russell Bingeman, and one sister, Mrs. Inadore H. Snyder of Rochester, Mich.

The notice of the funeral will be later.

Another Teacher Passes
The schools of Rochester owe their high reputation throughout the English-speaking countries largely to the quality of the men and women who have directed them, and it is a tragic misfortune that this year two of the city's foremost school directors should be taken away by death.

The sudden death of Ray A. Savage removed the head of one of the four junior high schools. The death of Clinton E. Kellogg, not unexpected but none the less mourned, removed another junior high school principal.

The places of both of these men will be filled—adequately, such is the efficiency and foresight with which the teaching staff of the schools is maintained—but the work they have done and the impress of their personality will not soon be forgotten.

The work that fell to Mr. Kellogg was particularly difficult and important, for it is not one of the least tasks of the public schools of the country to train the children of those who come from foreign lands both in the language and the customs of America and in the ideals which animate the nation.

Languages and customs can be taught by efficient pedagogy, but ideals can only be instilled by a teacher of sympathetic and respected character. Mr. Kellogg's success at Concord School, No. 15, where his pupils were largely the recent or immediate descendants of oversea peoples, prepared him excellently for his later more important task of starting pupils of the same type out into the world at the close of their schooling—for the junior high school to many pupils served by Washington Junior High School is the end of their formal education.

Mr. Kellogg was efficient and progressive in the practice of his profession; he added to efficiency and typtized a personality that won respect and admiration from his pupils, and brought out the best abilities in the many teachers who served under him.

Such men mean much to a city like Rochester; to a country like the United States. Their influence is inestimably wide and valuable.

E. G. MINER’S FATHER DIES AT AGE OF 91

Was Intimate of President Lincoln and One of Last Civil War Surgeons.

WINCHESTER, Ill., Sept. 18—(Special Dispatch)—Dr. James Miner, one of the last surviving surgeons of the Civil War, died here to-day at his residence, the Miner homestead, which was erected by his father, a pioneer banker of Illinois, nearly a century ago. Born January 16, 1823, he was educated in private schools, and in the public schools of Illinois. In his thirtieth year he entered Spurtie College, then the oldest educational institution in Illinois. After his graduation he took graduate courses in medicine in the medical college of the University of Missouri and Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Upon completion of his studies he was commissioned surgeon with the rank of major in the Illinois Volunteer Infantry, and remained in the service until retired through illness contracted during the campaign under Grant against Vicksburg, Corinth and Holly Springs, Mississippi. Following his recovery for almost fifty years he practiced medicine in Central Illinois. He was noted for his skill as a diagnostican. Through his father’s political friendship with Abraham Lincoln, he was a young man thrown frequently into contact with the President and his reminiscences formed the basis of an interesting correspondence with Lord Charnwood, former Senator Albert J. Beveridge and other writers interested in Lincoln.

He was a member of many medical and historical societies, a pioneer member of the American Medical Association and the last surviving surgeon of the class of 1843 of the Illinois Medical Association.

The funeral services for Mr. Miner were held today at the First Methodist Church. The remains will be removed to the Riverside Cemetery.

Bar Adopts Resolutions.

Resolutions on the death of Mr. Church were adopted at a special meeting of the Rochester Bar Association on Monday evening at the offices of William W. Welsh. The resolutions, drawn by a committee composed of Joseph W. Taylor, Morrison H. McNeil, Homer W. Morris, William R. Lee and John P. Bowman, follow:

Death snatches one of our ranks. This time, just past the prime of his life, measured by years, but in the very heyday of his activities and usefulness. Frederick F. Church. And the call comes with startling, shocking suddenness. A man was a participant at a luncheon given to a famous explorer. In the evening, with the companions of his adult years, he was indulging in a favorite diversion. There was no significant point, with only a barely audible sniff, the thread snapped. He gave up a brave life for its end.

Mr. Church was born at Alexandria, on the south bank of the Potomac river, May 7, 1837. In his early years, 1857-63, he was an active student at Rutgers College, and was admitted to the bar here in 1865. After 1863 he was in the Reynolds Arcade, and thereafter continuously in private practice. He had a reputation for sound and acceptable counsel, and a marked reputation for his business ability. He was admitted to the bar in New York, and was an active member of the Bar there.

Mr. Church was a man of pronounced abilities, but also a man of marked religious convictions, and a member of the Reformed Church.

Mr. Church was also a man of marked usefulness, and of the character that gives the city a sense of unshaken confidence. He was a man of marked usefulness, and of the character that gives the city a sense of unshaken confidence. He was a man of marked usefulness, and of the character that gives the city a sense of unshaken confidence. He was a man of marked usefulness, and of the character that gives the city a sense of unshaken confidence.
H. E. Wilson, Long Florist, Dies, Aged 81

Interest in Flowers and Trees Did Not Wane after Retiring.

Of Pioneer Stock

Was Born of Family Noted for Longevity; Funeral Rites To-morrow.

Hiram E. Wilson, for nearly a half century a florist and pioneer of Rochester, died last night at his home, No. 807 Avenue D, aged 87 years. Mr. Wilson was born in Rochester and had lived here all his life, having watched the city grow from a small community, consisting largely of farms and marshes, to its present size.

Mr. Wilson was born in a little farmhouse in what now is Wilson street, the son of Edwin F. Wilson, who lived to be 90 years old, and Lucinda Davis, who was born in Rochester. His uncle, John S. Wilson, lived to be 104 years old. He received his early education in a two-story, brick schoolhouse in Joseph avenue, at Baden street, the site of the present Andrews School, No. 9.

Mr. Wilson did not become established in the florist business until he was 40 years old. Beginning in a small store, he built up the business until now there are three stores.

Several years ago Mr. Wilson retired from active business but still maintained a deep interest in flowers and trees. In 1921, when he was well over 80, he cut down walnut trees, which he had planted sixty years before on his property. He had always been interested in such work and had planted trees and orchards, continually planting and replacing trees throughout his life.

End Came in Osburn House, Built by Father; Active in Christ Church.

Emory Wallace Osburn, one of Rochester's pioneer citizens, died early Tuesday morning after a long illness, aged 88 years. Connected for many years with his father, Nehemiah Osburn, in the contracting business, and owner of much valuable property in the city, Mr. Osburn played an important part in the growth and development of Rochester.

The son of Nehemiah and Sarah Van Schaletter Osburn, he was born on July 12, 1837, in an old house-stead located in East avenue where the Manhattan restaurant now stands. The family later moved to a residence at East avenue and Main street east on the site of the present Liberty building.

Mr. Osburn's father came to this city in 1812 and established a contracting business in which became one of the foremost concerns of its kind in the country and filled many large government contracts. Among the government buildings which he built were the United States court houses in Cincinnati, Baltimore and Chicago; the city hall in Detroit, the state capitol in Lansing, Mich., and the Federal buildings in Milwaukee. He also had large real estate buildings in Rochester and in both these activities the son was interested largely.

Nehemiah Osburn built the first Osburn House on the present site of the Granite building, and the present Osburn House in South avenue, where Emory Osburn and his wife, spent several winters after their removal from their Rochester residence to their summer home on Canandaigua lake.

Mr. Osburn was a lifelong member of Church and served on the Board of Vestrymen and the Building Committee when the church was erected.

His death resulted from an injury received last June, when he fell and fractured his left hip. He was removed from the Thompson Memorial Hospital at Canandaigua, where he had been since his accident, to the Osburn House, where he died.

SIMON HAUS,
EASTMAN CO.
Kodak Man Dies
Expires at East Avenue Home After Protracted Illness.

HAD RAPID RISE

Credited with Development of Kodak Business in England.

Simon V. Haus, of No. 2345 East Avenue, veteran Kodak executive, died late last night after a protracted illness, of hemorrhage on the brain.

Simon V. Haus was one of the veterans in the organization of the Eastman Kodak Company, having served the Kodak firm for more than thirty-six years, eight of which were spent on the Continent.

Haus was one of the men who entered the employ of the firm in its infancy and, starting in a minor capacity, advanced himself to the position of general manager of the European factories of the company, a position which he held until June, 1922.

Mr. Haus, after serving the Eastman company in a number of positions, was sent abroad in 1904 to reorganize the Harrow Kodak Works at Wealdstone. During Haus's time the English plant was small in size.

The outstanding achievement of Mr. Haus's career as a Kodak executive was the development of the English factory into a plant many times its former size and the placing of the products of that factory on a par with the American-made films and cameras.

Rosed Rapidly with Company.

Mr. Haus started work as an employee in the developing and printing department of the Rochester factory and later held in succession responsible positions as emulsion foreman, superintendent of the Kodak Park paper department and director of the Neopen chemical plant after it was acquired with the Eastman interests.

When he was sent to England in 1904, he intended to remain only a short time, but liked the country so well and found his employment so congenial that he remained as works manager at his own request.

During the period that Mr. Haus was manufacturing chief of Kodak in Great Britain, the factory was greatly increased in importance and size. He successfully used and developed processes and skillfully adapted them to the special needs of conditions there.

His superiors credit him with energy and ability in the development of the quality and uniformity of the English product.

Mr. Haus left the Harrow Works in June, 1925, and returned to this country. In the spring of 1925 he was added to the staff of executives assigned to the main office in State street where he had been employed since.

When he left Wealdstone, employees of the English Kodak plant presented Mr. Haus an antique grandfather clock, which was one of his many highly-prized possessions.

An account of the presentation of the timepiece by W. G. Bent, a fellow worker, to the London Telegraph, included the following verbal of Mr. Haus's work abroad.

Trans-Formed British Factory.

"Those who were there when Mr. Haus first came to England could picture the contrast in their own minds better than he could do in words. They had seen the working conditions then and now; they had seen facilities of all kinds given for the well-being of their bodies and minds. They had seen the welfare of the worker dignified to an immeasurable extent. The Kodak was among the first to demonstrate."

"All these changes meant so much to both the community and to themselves were brought about through the efforts of Mr. Haus. He founded a factory that was losing money for Kodak and a factory which could not have been a very pleasant place to work in. His ability and energy changed it into a works which now not only made goods of the highest quality, which could be sold at a profit, but a factory where it was a joy to work."

He leaves his wife, Anna North Haus; two daughters, Georgiana and Dorothy Haus; a sister, Miss Rose Haus; of Buffalo; and a brother, Frank Haus, of this city.

MISS MANVEL,
FORMER SCHOOL TEACHER, DEAD
Connected with Education System More Than Fifty Years.

Funeral services for Miss Elvina A. Manvel, for fifty years a teacher in the Rochester public schools, were held yesterday afternoon at her late home, No. 9 Bealborn street. Miss Manvel was among the successful teachers of the city, and numbered among her former pupils many of the prominent men and women of the community, most of whom never lost their affection for her. Representatives of various classes taught by her were at the funeral yesterday.

Miss Manvel began teaching in the Rochester schools in September, 1867, when she was assigned to what is now Horace Mann School No. 13, in Hickox street. In 1870 she was transferred to Wadsworth School No. 12, and five years later to old Monroe School, No. 15, in Monroe avenue. In 1878 she became a teacher at Concord School, No. 18, and in 1888 was transferred back to Horace Mann School, where she spent the rest of her teaching days. She retired from the service in 1917, when nearly 70 years old.

Miss Manvel was born in Rochester, her family having been among the early settlers of the city. She was one of the few remaining men and women who had served in public schools in the days when the community was a place of comparatively small things, when the schools and teaching methods were far different from those of today. For several months she served as acting principal of Horace Mann School, No. 15, in the period between the death of Principal Pike and the appointment of Roy H. Otterson to the position.

Miss Manvel leaves a sister, Mary Manvel, and a brother, Lewis C. Manvel.

Rev. A. T. Mercer, pastor of Emmanuel Baptist Church, officiated at the funeral services. Burial was in Mount Hope cemetery. The bearers were Joseph Gilmore, Kendall B. Castle, Clarence Vick, Wilson R. Gates, James Robinson and R. H. Otterson.
A special guard of honor for the casket while it lay in state was made up of representatives from the church and from the Board of Managers of the hospital. They were Mrs. W. A. Hubbard, Mrs. Edward O'Grady, Mrs. Frederick S. Miller, Mrs. John B. Barbour, Dr. Howard A. Allen and Lyle Medlar. The board of superintendents and deacons of the Lake Avenue Church acted as a special guard of honor for the casket at the service. Representatives of the Nurses Training School, the Nurses Alumni Association, the Rochester Alumni Association of the University of Michigan and other groups attended.

Dr. Barbour had charge of the services and George E. Fisher was at the organ. The quartet of the church sang, "Hark! Hark! My Soul," and "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere."

Private service took place at Riverside cemetery, where internment was made.

Telegram of Condolence Received from All Over Country.

"High tribute was paid Dr. John M. Lee, founder of the Lee Hospital and eminent surgeon and physician, at the service yesterday afternoon at the Lake Avenue Baptist Church. Rev. Albert W. Beaven, D. D., Dr. Lee's pastor for the past sixteen years, conducted the services and spoke feelingly of the strength and character of Dr. Lee, his iron will, his decision, courage, his skill as a physician and his hard work.

"While we did not think of Dr. Lee first of all as a man of prayer and devotion, a sequence of the help that comes from God meant more to a man when he came to the close of life."

Dr. Barbour Pays Tribute.

Rev. Clarence A. Barbour, D. D., president of the Rochester Theological Seminary, who assisted Dr. Beaven, spoke especially of Dr. Lee's ability to rise above adversity, his service to the poor and destitute, his eminence as a physician and surgeon and of his great service to the church, which he supported wholeheartedly. Rev. Whitney S. K. Temple, associate pastor of the Lake Avenue Church, also assisted Dr. Beaven.

Physicians, nurses, business men and persons eminent in many walks of life made up the large crowd which attended the service at the church. Hundreds more were passed by the casket as it lay in state in the church and prior to that time in the parlors of the Lee Hospital.

The floral tributes came from people of all stations, rich and poor. Contributing in expressions of love and sympathy. Eminent churchmen and leaders in political life were among those sending flowers. Telegrams were received by Mrs. Lee from all over the United States. Senator Royal S. Copeland and Governor D. McDougal wrote a radiant letter of sympathy.

"Greatest kindness in the death of my lifelong friend and your beloved husband."

Tributes from Afar.

General W. T. T. Wood, retired from the Baltimore Hotel at Los Angeles has his expression of sympathy and this tribute: "This distinguished career will ever stand out as an example in our great profession."

Dr. James C. Wood, an outstanding surgeon in Cleveland, paid this tribute by wire: "He was a surgeon of international reputation, a man of unimpeachable character and a friend whose fidelity was unfailing."

Mr. Miller was out of action for considerable time with a severe case of fever, which left him permanently lame.

He was born on a sailing vessel in New York Harbor. For the last thirty-five years he had been a special agent for the German Insurance Company.

Mr. Miller leaves his wife, Olive Angerine Miller, whom he married immediately after being mustered out of the army; a son, Lewis W. Miller, of this city, and two grandchildren, Robert and Warren E. died at 82; was thought dead in Civil War prison

Edward Hargrave, Mason, Here, Crawled to Life from Andersonville.

JAN., 18, 1926

EDWARD HARGRAVE.

Edward Hargrave, Civil War veteran and for many years a resident of Rochester, died Friday at his home, No. 19 Jacobs street, aged 82 years.

Mr. Hargrave served in the Union army for nearly four years during the Civil War, enlisting when he was 16 years old. After receiving a honorable discharge at the end of his enlistment, he returned to Camp Sumter, New York, where he was taken prisoner by the Confederate army at the Battle of Gettysburg.

Taken first to Libby Prison in Virginia, and later transferred to Andersonville Prison, at Camp Sumter, Georgia, Mr. Hargrave spent nine months amid conditions of indescribable hardship and misery. Of the 35,000 Union soldiers imprisoned at Andersonville, more than 15,000 died from starvation and exposure. Many of them were forced to sleep in the open through all kinds of weather, and the daily rations furnished them were barrels of uncooked corn meal. The sick were given attention or turned out of the prison to wander in the surrounding woods and marshes until they died.

It was sickness which finally brought Mr. Hargrave's release from Andersonville. In the months which had passed without proper food and shelter, he had become a living skeleton, and when it was thought that he could live only a few days at the most, he was taken outside the "dead line" and high wirework which surrounded the prison and given his freedom. Too weak even to walk, he crawled for miles on his hands and knees, finally reaching his home at the time.

This is a true story of the Civil War and the course of the Union soldiery.

DR. JAMES A. AMES
TO BE BURIED TO-DAY

The passing of a business man of the calibre of Henry F. Marks, former president of the Traders' National Bank, and vice-president of the National Bank of Rochester, is a distinct loss to any community, and particularly to Rochester.

Mr. Marks was a native of the city, was educated in its public schools, and by the force of his character and application had risen from his first job as messenger to the presidency of the same bank, and when the bank was consolidated with the National Bank of Commerce, he was one of those who contributed materially to the formation and upbuilding of the new banking house.

Mr. Marks was active in the community life, and during the war, in the frequent Liberty-loan drives, he played an energetic part in keeping Rochester abreast and in advance of its part of that patriotic duty.

The importance of banking in the life of a community is large; and the satisfactory operation of its function depends much on the character of the men who direct it. Mr. Marks had a character that met these requirements.
B. L. FENNER, ARCHITECT OF NOTE, PASSES
0 + C. Jan. '96
Former Resident of City Dies Suddenly at His Home in New York.
1976

Burt Leslie Fenner, prominent New York architect and former resident of Rochester, died suddenly Sunday night at his home in New York.

Mr. Fenner was a member of the New York firm of McKim, Mead & White, architects, who collaborated with the Rochester firm of Gordon & Kaebler in designing the Eastman Theater and other Rochester buildings, including the Rochester Savings Bank and Lincoln Alliance Bank and the Rochester Gas and Electric Company building in East avenue.

Mr. Fenner was a son of the late Edward B. Fenner, prominent Rochetester lawyer. He was born in 1870, and received his early education here.
He attended the University of Rochetester, where he was a member of the Pat Utica fraternity, and later went to the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, where he received his degree. Returning to Rochester, he entered the profession of architecture and was connected with several firms here before his removal to New York.

Mr. Fenner was connected with McKim, Mead & White for about thirty years. His rise in that concern was rapid, and some years ago he was taken into partnership. The work of this firm is characterized by studies in classic and Renaissance architecture and by beauty of the classic type.

Important buildings which it designed include the University Club, the Pennsylvania station and the Pennsylvania Hotel, the municipal building and the Columbia University buildings in New York. During Roosevelt's administration the firm drew plans for the remodeling of the White House, and Mr. Fenner was personally responsible for the carrying out of that work.

In 1911 Mr. Fenner received an honorary degree from the University of Rochester for his distinguished work in the architectural field. He was a member of the American Institute of Architects at one time serving on the board of trustees.

Mr. Fenner leaves his wife and one brother, Capt. Edward B. Fenner, of Washington.
George Joel, 93, Made Start Carrying Pack on Back.

George Joel, probably the oldest traveling salesman in the world and one of the oldest Masons in New York State, died Saturday evening at his home, No. 467 Clifford avenue, aged 93 years. He had retired a year ago from the employ of the Underwood Whip Company of Westfield, Mass., after serving as a commercial traveler for seventy-seven years.

Mr. Joel was born in Lynn county, Norfolk, England, on July 4, 1841. Left fatherless when 7 years old, he ran away from home and worked as captain's boy on a ship. His sea career was cut short by a shipwreck, after which he was rescued in a small boat. It was directly after the wreck, in 1841, that he came to America with his sister.

Mr. Joel lived in New York city for some time and later went to Albany to live with a sister. When he was 10 years old he took to the road, selling Yankee notions, needles, pins, stockings and small articles for the housewife. In those days he traveled aboard, carrying his pack of wares on his back. Since that time he has traveled afoot, on horseback, by buggy and by rail from coast to coast.

Mr. Joel came to Rochester in 1869 and was employed by J. C. Lighthouse, manufacturer of housecollars, then located in State street at Central avenue. After Mr. Lighthouse's death, Mr. Joel changed his line to horse whips, being employed by the Steiner & More Whip Company, of Westfield, Mass. When that firm broke up on the death of one of the partners, he went to the Underwood Whip Company of the same city. In his whole career of nearly a century he changed jobs only three times.

He retired after his eyesight failed as the result of a fall. After his retirement he was extremely active, tending a large garden and taking a two-mile walk each morning.

Mr. Joel was married in this city in 1861. His wife died about twelve years ago. At the time of their golden wedding anniversary in 1911, they were given a loving cup by members of the family.

He was a member of Valley Lodge of Masons, Commercial Travelers Association, the Monroe County Democratic Club and Temple Beth Rodeh, of Utica. He leaves three sons, Hyman, Isadore and Solomon; two daughters, Miss Sophie Joel and Miss Leah Rosen, of Boston, and fourteen grandchildren.

Funeral services will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock. Interment will be made in the family lot in Mount Hope cemetery.

profession at large and to his associates in Rochester in particular. The greatest perhaps was courage—courage to fight for his convictions. While this spirit made opponents, and of-times bitter opponents, it made also those who disagreed respect him for his character. It was this courage which earned him the title of the legislative halls: this courage that enabled us, as members of the medical profession, to enjoy many privileges to-day which would not have been possible without this courage. It enabled the citizens of Rochester and the country at large to enjoy hospital facilities that would not be possible to-day had it not been for the courage and character of John M. Lee.

It is in this character which will be remembered long after his reputation as a surgeon and progressive student of medicine is forgotten.

There is a vast difference between character and reputation. Reputation may be made in a day and lost in a moment; but character is built day by day and when built upon the right foundation, will last eternal. Such was the character of John M. Lee.

This particular group of the profession will especially long for the remembrance of our brother, who has gone the way from which no traveler returns. The wise counsel, the real interest shown in our affairs will be cherished memories kept ever bright by the remembrance of his help in time of trouble. As we walk in these halls and work in this hospital, we will feel his kindly presence in spirit, that will give us courage and help.

Let us resolve to-night among ourself, to put our shoulder to the wheel, to conduct ourselves and our affairs in this hospital that it will always remain in the high esteem of the public, our profession and the American College of Surgeons, that our departed brother so desired while working with us.

AMOS H. COBB

PASSES AFTER

BRIEF ILLNESS

Officer of Canners, Inc.,

Taken Ill at Convention

Session Last Week.

BORN IN BROOKLYN

Entered Preserving Firm

Started by Father and Later Moved to City.

Amos Hubbell Cobb, secretary and treasurer of the New York Canners, Inc., died of pneumonia yesterday morning in the Brown Hotel, Louisville, Ky., following an illness contracted during the convention of the National Canners’ Association in Louisville last week.

Mr. Cobb, who lived in Penfield road, Brighton, was 53 years old. He leaves his wife; a brother, George W. Cobb, of New York; two sons, Amos H. Cobb, 3d., of Miami, Fla.; George Warren Cobb, of this city, and a daughter, Mrs. Harry A. Sessions, of Brighton. Mr. Cobb’s wife, his brother and his two sons were at his bedside when he died. His daughter is at present on the Atlantic ocean, having sailed last week for a Mediterranean cruise.

Moved to Rochester.

Mr. Cobb was born in Brooklyn, the son of Amos Hubbell Cobb and Angel Hodgeman Cobb. At an early age his parents moved to Fairport, where Mr. Cobb’s father organized the Cobb Preserving Company. Mr. Cobb was educated in the Fairport High School, Colgate Academy and Colgate University. At the death of his father he left college, before the completion of his course, and entered the company that the elder Cobb had organized.

At his marriage, about twenty-nine years ago, Mr. Cobb moved to this city, although the plant of the Cobb Preserving Company, of which he was president, remained in Fairport. He continued to operate the Cobb Preserving Company, until that concern merged several years ago with the New York Canners, Inc., at which time Mr. Cobb became an officer of the last named organization. Mr. Cobb, with his brother, George W. Cobb, also organized the Sanitary Can Company, a company that manufactured the first cans to be used in preserving fruits and vegetables that were sealed with solder. For years the food products that were canned in the plant of the Cobb Preserving Company were put up in the cans manufactured by the Sanitary Can Company.

Later the Sanitary Can Company was merged with the American Can

Company, of New York, and George W. Cobb became associated with this concern as general manager, a position which he has for years held.

When Mr. Cobb, accompanied by his wife, left this city last week for the convention of the National Canners’ Association, he was in excellent health. Mr. Cobb was chairman of the fruit section of the national association and presided at one meeting of the section before illness forced him to retire from the convention sessions. For several days it was not believed that his illness was serious, but early this week he suffered a relapse. His two sons were summoned to his bedside, Amos H., the older, arriving only a few hours before his father died.

Had Many Friends.

Mr. Cobb was a devoted family man, and took keen interest in both the recreational and business interests of his son. His pleasing personality and cordiality had won him a host of friends both in this city and among business acquaintances abroad.

Mr. Cobb was former president of the New York State Canners Association, a director of the National Association, and a member of the Genesee Valley Club, Oak Hill, Rochester Historical Society, Rochester Yacht Club, Chamber of Commerce, Rochester Ad Club, and Sons of the American Revolution. He was also fire commissioner of the city of Brighton and was a trustee in the Presbyterian Church of Rochester.

The body will be brought to this city.

W.R. SEWARD FUNERAL TO BE PRIVATE Retired Banker Dies Hour After Close of His 92d Birthday.

ACTIVE TILL DEATH
Feb. 10, 1926
High Character and Quiet

William R. Seward

Funeral services for William Rossiter Seward, pioneer resident of Rochester, retired banker and private philanthropist, who died early yesterday morning at his home, No. 218 Alexander street, after quietly celebrating his 92d birthday, will be private, only a few close friends of the family being present. It was announced last night.

Mr. Seward's death came shortly after he had spent a happy day in the absence of his anniversary. He had received friends who had called to congratulate him and in the afternoon went for a short automobile ride as was his custom.

Active Until Death.

Except that he complained slightly of weariness he seemed to be in his usual health, until about midnight when there were indications of illness and Dr. George W. Cole, his physician and long-time friend, was summoned. Mr. Seward died shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday morning, the news of his death coming as a shock to friends who had been with him the day before.

Despite his advanced years, Mr. Seward was unusually active and his mind remained his own until the time of his death. Each day he had spent several hours motoring, a privilege which he had not found enough to bait the traditional infirmities of old age.

His death ended a long life of self-effacing service to his fellow citizens and closed a career that had made his constant gain the betterment of the community and the help of his fellowmen. His untiring philanthropies aided many unfortunate families whose identity or status never became known even to his intimates.

Came to City on Canal.

Mr. Seward was born in New Lebanon, N.Y., on February 8, 1834. His parents came to Rochester shortly after his birth, making the trip by way of the Erie Canal. The canal boat on which they traveled made the trip in a little over a week. It was in 1834 that the village of Rochester was incorporated.

The Seward family took up its residence at Alexander street and Monroe street and after several years moved to 120 North Clinton street, where Mr. Seward continued to live during part of his life in Rochester.

Pioneer Passes

William R. Seward.

Later they moved to the north, on the same thoroughfare, and finally Mr. Seward took up his residence at No. 218 Alexander street, where he lived until his death.

In 1852 he became a clerk in the Farmers and Mechanics Bank, following the death of his father. An epidemic of black cholera swept the village in that year, and the elder Seward's death was the first that the disease caused. The son, 14 years old at the time, went to work in the bank to assist in the care of his mother and a sister, Sarah Louisa Seward, who later married E. P. Gould, of Rochester.

Made Bank Cashier.

At the age of 28, in 1862, Mr. Seward married Josephine Coburn, of Dracut, Mass. Five years later he was named cashier of a newly organized bank, the Bank of Monroe, in the service of which he continued until 1890. In that bank he was associated closely with Hiram Sibley, Sr., who died in 1890. Later Mr. Seward became a director of the Fidelity Trust Company and the Mechanics Savings Bank.

His interest in charity work had been manifest for many years. He was associated with many charitable organizations, while his own personal and private charities were many. He was president for a time of the Organization of Charities, finally merged into the Social Welfare League. He was also president of the Board of Directors of the State Industrial School.

He leaves a daughter, Mrs. Mary S. Mosher, of this city, and a son, William C. Seward, of Dorset, Ont. His wife died about fifteen years ago.

Friends Pay Tribute.

Dr. Golier, his close personal friend and with him at the time of his death, last night paid the following tribute to Mr. Seward:

William R. Seward passed out of this life an hour after his 92d birthday. He spent a last happy day on earth giving the congratulations of his friends and their friends. One of the things that stood out in the character of William R. Seward was the judicial quality of his mind. He was wise, but not wise to others but he knew what men really have, that is, a just appreciation of his affairs which was often of a material sort. He thinks for many people but he never spoke of them and he never permitted others to speak of them. He had wonderful confidence in people and it is a good thing that they did not always destroy it. He felt that no matter what people did, they did it for love.

With all his justice, his kindness and helpfulness, he was a most religious man. His religion was a liberal religion. He believed that without form or ceremony people found their way into a religious life through themselves and that man is as he is by the weight of the words that he points, and if he were to do anything, he hated shame. No man came under his influence but that he was better for it. He did not make an example in his behavior, in his conversation, and in his whole life. This was William R. Seward.

William R. Hale, president of the Mechanics Savings Bank said: "Mr. Seward was one of the finest, highest-souled men that I have known and he was absolutely incapable of an action that was not just and noble."

Trustees of the bank adopted a resolution in which they stated that Mr. Seward's judgment and his keen insight into the character of people with whom he associated made him almost invaluable to the institution and that no one with whom he was brought in contact failed to feel the influence of his great character in ways leading to the side of justice and righteousness.

T. U., William Rossiter Seward

Death of William R. Seward removes one of the oldest and best loved residents of Rochester.

Mr. Seward was born Feb. 8, 1834, in New Lebanon, N.Y., but was brought to this city by his parents when a baby. He thus spent practically all of his life in Rochester. He possessed a remarkable fund of information regarding the growth of the city, the changes which have taken place here, and the men who have been leaders in business and civic affairs.

This truly remarkable life spanned one of the most significant periods in modern history. Mr. Seward was brought to Rochester as a baby in arms, in a packet on the Erie canal, before the days of the steam locomotive. He lived to have a radio in his own home.

As cashier and active executive head of the Monroe Bank, when that institution, since dissolved, was controlled by the late Hiram Sibley, Mr. Seward was at one time in close touch with Rochester business life. For more than 70 years he lived in the residence at 218 Alexander street, where he died yesterday, just after many friends had congratulated him on entering his 93d year. He was one of the early stockholders in the Eastman Kodak Company, taking shares in return for a lot sold to the late William H. Walker, a neighbor.

William R. Seward was a man of kindly disposition and truly remarkable generosity. He contributed his share to organized charities, but the greater part of his benevolences went directly to persons whom he knew to be in need of aid.

There are today in Rochester many families and individuals who could testify to the generous assistance given by Mr. Seward in times of trouble and distress, enabling them to get... on their feet again and escape hardship, or to meet an emergency.
It was one of the distinguishing qualities of his heart and mind that, although he had a keen sense of historical values and discussed early events with great intelligence and zest, he was always more interested in the world's progress than in merely historical reminiscence. No youngster just out of college more eagerly espoused progressive movements than did William Seward, even in his most advanced years.

William R. Seward will be remembered by all who knew him as one who was the truest and kindest of friends.

Two Carloads of Beer, Valued at $10,000, Seized by Federal Men on New York Central Siding

Two carloads of alleged Peruvian beer, valued at about $10,000, were seized by the C.I.O. men yesterday morning, when they arrived at the New York Central siding at North Branch, 25 miles from New York, and were sent on to Philadelphia. The beer was identified as Peruvian, although it was alleged to have been taken from Peruvian vessels when they were being unloaded at the New York Central siding.

The beer was taken from the siding at the instance of the C.I.O. union, which has been engaged in a labor dispute with the railroad company for some time.

The beer was to be taken to the United States Custom House, but it was found that the C.I.O. men had no authority to take it, and the beer was returned to the siding.

Innocent Boy Rises to Fame and Wealth Despite Adversity.
In the life story of John J. Bausch, who came to this country at the age of 19 as a poor immigrant, founded after many struggles a little enterprise for the sale of eyeglasses and lived to see it expand into one of the largest optical manufacturing companies in the world, there is much of inspiration and instruction for ambitious young men.

Success did not come quickly or easily to John J. Bausch. Forced to abandon his first trade of woodworker by an accident which caused him to lose two fingers, he turned to good account the knowledge of the optical business which he had acquired as a youth in Germany.

As this enterprise was established in 1853, Mr. Bausch, at the time of his death yesterday, had been engaged in the optical business in Rochester for over 72 years, or a longer period than the entire span of most men's lives.

Into the history of his early struggles to maintain the business, as into that of the career of many other successful men, enters an incident of assistance from a loyal friend, who later became his partner. Henry Lomb loaned John Bausch $60 at a time when only a friend would have been willing to advance even that small sum. It was agreed that if the business warranted it he should become a partner.

From the very first Mr. Bausch established those standards of quality and displayed that zeal for improvements in manufacturing methods and design which have characterized the firm to this day. Rubber frames for eyeglasses, perfected by unfiring labor, were a product which gave impetus to the business in its early days. He also designed power machinery for lens grinding.

By making photographic lenses the company assisted in the development of the camera, which has so conspicuous a place in Rochester's industrial history.

John J. Bausch was president of the Bausch & Lomb Optical Company and was active in its affairs almost until shortly before his death, at the age of 95 years. He was personally known to a great number of the workers in the plant.

He had a great interest in the charitable work of the community and in community enterprises, such as the General Hospital and the Mechanics Savings Bank, both of which he served as president.

John J. Bausch will be remembered both for his personal qualities and as one of the builders of Rochester.
BELL TOLLS FAREWELL TO OPTICAL HEAD

High Officials Mingle with Humblest Employees in Paying Respects.

As the funeral cortège of John Jacob Bausch passed the Bausch & Lomb plant in St. Paul street yesterday afternoon on its way to Mount Hope cemetery, the bell in the tower tolled the last of ninety-five peals, one for each year in Mr. Bausch’s life. The many and varied scores of workers, gathered in sorrowing demonstration as the body of the late employer and friend was carried past the plant which is the product of his industrial acumen.

Earlier in the day, the employees and friends of Mr. Bausch, in solemn tribute, passed the bier in the home, No. 1,075 St. Paul street. Approximately 5,000 persons passed through the home, being organized in groups by their foremen. The first group to view the body was that of the Early Settlers’ Association, made up of 200 workers who have been in the employ of the company for twenty-five years or more. These employees, and scores of others knew Mr. Bausch intimately, he being active in the business until December, 1924.

Many Floral Tributes.

A wealth of floral tributes, from all parts of the world, was in the house. Telegrams and cables电 were received from high army and navy officers, who knew of Mr. Bausch’s skill and characterizations, because of the large amount of war material manufactured at the factory and from prominent persons in the optical industry throughout the world. Mr. Bausch was recognized widely as the founder of the optical industry in the United States.

Employees filling through memory of John J. Bausch.

The funeral services were held at 2:30 o’clock, Rev. Frederick J. Frankenthal, of Salem Evangelical Church, acting as officiating clergyman. Gathered in the house were many of the prominent men of the city who knew intimately of the qualities that made possible Mr. Bausch’s business achievements. Minister Pays Tribute.

In his funeral remarks, Rev. Mr. Frankenthal pointed out that he knew Mr. Bausch as a neighbor for fifteen years, and characterized him as a “man, father and friend.” Rev. Mr. Frankenthal said:

"To pay a tribute to the very annual life and character of Father Bausch, or to a career of useful service, is an extraordinary purpose. It is not my purpose to review, upon this occasion, the very interesting career of his eventful life, nor to relate the varied experiences of his industrious career in the earlier days, so full of energy and disappointment, in the later years so rich in romance and glorious achievement. It is, however, given in his own words to the world through the written and oral record of human accompaniment with which he has accompanied the history of the country, of the city in which he has lived, and the many monuments in other lands bear eloquent testimony of the great paralysed success which crowned his unerring judgment and endearing spirit;..."

He was treasurer of the board and active also on the school board. Aside from these offices, Mr. Durand's activities had been largely of an unobtrusive nature, but his interest in all matters pertaining to the best interests of the city was well known.

He was a member of the Board of Directors of the Rochester Trust and Safe Deposit Company, a charter member of the Genesee Valley Club, a member of the Rochester Country Club of the Kent Club, an organization of lawyers and of the Yale University Club. He was a cousin of Dr. Henry E. Durand, donor of property included in Durand-Eastman Park, and of Mrs. Edward W. Mulligan.

Mr. Durand leaves his wife, Lily McConnell Durand, to whom he was married in 1884 in Rochester; a son, Samuel E. Durand, and two grandchildren, Virginia and John E. Durand, 2d.

DEATH EVICTIONS RECLUSE FROM HER OLD HOME

Miss Anna E. Parsons Dies in House She Occupied MORE THAN 70 YEARS ORDERED OUT ONCE

Rescued from Want by Few Friends; Was Cousin of Mayor Parsons.

Miss Anna E. Parsons died yesterday at her home, No. 16 Franklin square, where she lived for more than seventy years, aged 85 years. Miss Parsons was born here, a daughter of the late Joseph and Mary Barrons Parsons. She was a cousin of the late Cornelius R. Parsons, who served seven terms as mayor of Rochester.

Since the death of her mother more than thirty years ago, Miss Parsons lived alone in the modestly furnished home. Always keeping to the house, her only means of communication with the outside world were the newspaper and occasional visits from neighbors.

Facing eviction in March, 1919, because of an overdue mortgage, Miss Parsons, friendless and penniless, refused to be evicted, but calmly sat in her home awaiting the result of any action that could be taken to carry out the order. The mortgage was held by the Monroe County Savings Bank and amounted to $2,200, the property being valued at $3,500.

Barrons, who died in 1911, leased the property in 1854 at an annual rent of $300, and, because of a discrepancy in the original agreement, Miss Parsons claimed the rent was $200 lower. The matter was brought before the district court, where the mortgage was proved and an order made for eviction.

Helped by Friends.

Days of despair for Miss Parsons followed. Efforts by several friends to purchase the property from the bank for her failure. It was until her furniture was finally removed from her home and placed in a van, that a course was agreed to in time for her to spend the rest of her days there.

Joseph A. Tait, as trustee, and a number of other warm-hearted citizens of Rochester, finally purchased the property from the bank and gave her the little house for as long as she might need it.

For years, more years than most of her neighbors care to remember, Miss Parsons has been the victim of a mystery. Always since the death of her mother she had lived alone and neglected with very few of those who lived near. She never asked favors. She seemed different to the eyes of her neighbors. Her reason for being different, as gossip goes, is that she was disappointed in love, once, but three times, and that the effect was to give her a desire for solitude and distrust of men.

In earlier years, before she faced eviction, with the blinds of the cottage tight drawn at all hours of the day and night, with the little yard uncultivated, with the house itself falling into decay, the lonely woman and her home, the target for the missiles and gibes of small boys in the neighborhood. Three generations of small boys have hurled things at Miss Parsons' windows, sped by the house after dusk, shouting "Crazy! Crazy!" while a bush snapped around the corner out of reach.

Gilded by Boys.

Some of her neighbors once said that she was unbalanced because of her anger at the boys who threw stones through her windows, and once she was spirited away to a hospital for the insane, but was released a few days later with a clean bill of health.

In her later years the little group of Rochesterians who worked the property for her made her comfortable. The house was improved, city water installed and room arranged. Each year it was looked over and needed repairs done.

The body will be removed to the undertakers at No. 193 East avenue, from where funeral services will take place to-morrow afternoon at 1:30 o'clock. Burial will be in the family plot in Mount Hope cemetery. The plot was purchased by her father years before he died and it is said to be one of the most beautiful in the cemetery. Her parents and brother, S. Warner Parsons, who died in his junior year, and the University of Rochester, are buried there.
L. J. CARTER, WRITER, DIES; BORN IN CITY

Wrote Melodramas That Throiled Audiences

Generation Ago.

PARENTS ON STAGE

1876

Named for Lincoln Who Was Shot on Day Carter Was Born Here.

Chicago, July 13. — (Special Dispatch) — The curtain fell today on the final act in the life drama of L. J. Carter, creator of hundreds of melodramas that have thrilled the hearts of thousands.

It is one month ago that he could not look long, said the playwright, "I am ready for my car. I have had all the happiness and comfort that could be packed into one life.

Knowing the end was not distant, Mr. Carter retired some years ago from active life and settled down on his estate near Goshen, Ind., which he had bought with part of the royalties on plays that had audiences spellbound in every city and village visited by the old stock companies prior to the advent of the movies. He was 61 years of age. He was born in Rochester, N. Y., of actor parents. On the day he was born, April 14, 1865, President Lincoln was assassinated and in tribute to the martyred executive whom she admired, Carter's mother christened him Lincoln. Cary Carter, his father, was proprietor of a traveling troupe known throughout the country fifty years ago.

Wrote "The Fast Mail." Some of Lincoln J. Carter's best known thrillers were "The Fast Mail" and "The Heart of Chicago." Old-timers will readily recall the faraway sound of a locomotive—a dim speck of light that grew—the increasing roar of the oncoming train, the blinding flash of the headlight as the brakeman screamed and the "night mail" arrived on the stage.

In 1863 he produced his first thriller, "Sidonia," at the Academy of Music in Chicago. Then came "The Fast Mail" in 1889; "The Tornado" in 1869; "The Defiant" in 1879; "Under the Dome" in 1884; "The Heart of Chicago," in 1890; "Remember the Maine" in 1890, and "Chattanooga" in 1898.

With the profits from his shows, Carter bought the Criterion Theater in Chicago, stages "The Flaming Arrow"; "Down in Mobile"; "The Elephant's Heart"; "Wee Willie Winkie." "Too Proud to Beg," "Her Only Sin," "The Eye Witness," "Bedford's Hope" and "White Prince Bows." At one time he had twenty companies playing out of Chicago. He claimed he never had written a failure.

First select a mechanical sensation and then build a plot around it, was Carter's unorthodox formula for writing melodramas. "Let no manifestation of nature's forces, on land and sea,, bite you, and always have a happy ending."

Birth of the motion picture industry meant the death of the old stock companies. Mr. Carter tried a few films, but they were not successful, and he retired on his board.

On February 12, 1926, he married Mrs. Mary L. Whitmer, of Goshen, Ind., a year after the death of his first wife. The first Mrs. Carter, resident of Chicago since 1855, died here in January, 1913. Harry and Lincoln J. Carter, Jr., are her sons.

Surviving Mr. Carter, besides the widow, are one son, Lincoln J. Carter, Jr., connected with the advertising department of the Studebaker Corporation, South Bend Ind.; one half brother, Walter Linn, of Salt Lake City and two half sisters, Miss Hattie Carter and Miss Lettee Kohberg, residents of Salt Lake City.

Old-timers in the theatrical business in Rochester knew nothing of Carter's last night except by reputation. He was generally looked upon as a Chicago man, and if his earlier years were spent in Rochester, no one could be found last night who knew either him or his family.

J. R. Pierce, first house manager of the Lyceum Theater, acting from 1888 to 1915, said:

"Carter specialized as an author of melodramas of the ten, twenty, thirty type. He was a Chicago man and I never knew him or met him personally."

In December he was assigned to the Artillery Brigade of the Sixth Corps and participated in the operations of the Army of the Potomac until the surrender of General Lee. Later his regiment moved to Danville and from there to Washington. Here he was assigned to DeRussy's division of the Twenty-third Corps, and the latter part of May, 1865, he was transferred back to the Fourth Artillery.

He was honorably mustered out of service September 26, 1863, in Washington.

The following is an official record of the most important actions in which Mr. Weller participated in: Wilderness, March 5 to 7, 1864; Spotsylvania, May 8th to 21st; Cold Harbor, June 1st to 12th; Petersburg, June 15th to 26th; Totopotomoy, May 27th to 31st; Cold Harbor, June 26th to 28th; Weldon Railroad, June 21st to 24th; Deep Bottom, July 27th to 29th; Frederick, August 14th to 18th; Reams Station, August 26th; Petersburg, April 2, 1865; Sailor's Creek, April 6th. Appomattox, April 9th.

Mr. Weller was a member of the Thomas Farr Post, G. A. R., of Webster. Funeral services will be held on this afternoon at 3 o'clock at the home of his son, John G. Weller, No. 20 Jailhouse, west. Interment will be made in West Webster Rural cemetery.

The following March he joined the Army of the Potomac in the field and was assigned to the second corps.

The same month he participated in the battle of the Wilderness and in May he was at Spottsylvania, North Anna and Totopotomoy. On May 1st he was engaged in the battle at Cold Harbor, later the army moved through Cold Harbor and Weldon railroad. In the last two engagements he was with the artillery reserve of the Twentieth Corps. In the latter part of August he was detailed to the Third New York Volunteer Light Artillery. JOSEPH BLOSS, PROMINENT IN REFORMS, DIES

Descendant of Pioneer of Colonial Times Passes Away at Age of 86.

SPENT LIFE HERE 1816

Active in Abolition Cause, Temperance and Women's Rights Movements.

In the death of Joseph B. Bloss, No. 334 Oxford street, early yesterday morning, there passed away another man who had been active in the great reforms of the last century. On November 23d last, Mr. Bloss passed his eighty-sixth birthday in the city where he had spent all his life and where he had made material contributions to the forward-thinking movements of his age.

Mr. Bloss was the son of William Cough Bloss, who came to Rochester with his parents in 1818, when he was 21 years old. Mr. Bloss's mother came from Cape Cod in 1812 in a covered wagon and lived with her sister in a log cabin where Brighton now is. On one occasion she drove away some Indians who had come to steal food from her larder. The father and grandfather of William Bloss both served in the Revolutionary war and the latter was killed in 1776 in defense of the city. William Bloss conducted a hotel in Brighton, but soon after was connected to the temperance movement and made a public demonstration of destroying the liquor in his house.

Ardent Abolitionist.

William Bloss was also one of the originators of the abolitionist movement. In 1834 he published one of the first papers issued on the subject in this country entitled "The Rights of Man." In 1838 he advocated the vote for women and was prominent in the movement, as well as the agitation for a free school law. For three years, from 1845 to 1848, he represented this district in the Assembly.

He was born in 1836 at the home to which his parents had moved in East avenue, near Seio street. He was educated at old No. 14 School and Classical Seminary. His father's house was on of the stations in the underground railway, helping escaped slaves to the North to reach Can-da, where they might be safe from pursuit. Some of the most vivid childhood memories of Mr. Bloss were in connection with this work of his father, for he often helped conduct the frightened fugitives from his father's house to that of Mr. Douglass in South avenue or to the lake shore. He heard John Brown speak at the Court House, Brought up in such an atmosphere, the boy became a strong advocate of the abolitionist movement and, after the slavery question came to the front, of their actually obtaining the equal rights to which they were entitled by law.

Following his father in agitation for temperance and women's rights, on two occasions Mr. Bloss brought Mrs. Emomalie Pankhurst and her daughter, Sylva, to Rochester for lectures.

Mr. Bloss was one of the founders of the Labor Lyceum and in the days before it developed as a temperance organization, while he was a temperance advocate, he adopted many other movements in which he actively showed his interest. One of the things he wanted to see was the establishment of the Indian reservations in the northeastern part of the state. He was a tried optimist. "I believe that justice and right will triumph," he said. "All that is wrong will eventually pass away."

Mr. Bloss began his business career in a grocery store in Brighton, where he worked until he became connected with the wholesale grocery firm of C. C. Bril and Company, with which he was connected until he retired from business some years ago.

In 1885 Mr. Bloss married Mary Helen Rhode, of Canandaigua. She died leaving an infant daughter. He later married Ella Welch, of Port Hope, Canada.

Of late years Mr. Bloss's birthdays have been marked by a meeting of the William Cough Bloss Club, an organization founded in 1905 by persons most of whom live in the Brighton section and whom the history of the Bloss family is most closely associated. Its membership is limited to one hundred and is always full.

Mr. Bloss retained his excellent health until a week ago, when the disease which ended his death set in. He leaves his widow, Ella Welch Bloss; a daughter, Mrs. Roger B. Vull, of Highland Park, Ill.; and three sons, William Cough Bloss, of Okmulgee, Okla.; Joseph Blossom Bloss, Jr., and Emil Welch Bloss, of this city.

Funeral services will take place from 10 to 11 o'clock this afternoon. Interment will be made in the Brighton cemetery, where stands the monument to his father, which bears the inscription, "A thinker in advance of his age and an educator upon whose lips the people hung."

Barlow, chairman of the organization of public workers. His resignation was accepted, and Mr. Van Zandt succeeded to the position of mayor, being unanimously elected by the board of supervisors. He was reelected in November at the annual election.

To the many friends and business acquaintances who will be shocked and surprised at the announcement of the death of Mayor Van Zandt, his neighbors and business associates, with a few kind words, he will be remembered for his strength and ability, and the leadership he showed while in office.

His children were born in the city, the only one of whom, Mrs. C. C. Keeler, of Canandaigua, is living. Mrs. Van Zandt died in 1927.

Mayor Van Zandt was appointed by the Board of Education of Rochester in 1924, and after the death of Mayor Van Zandt he was reelected to the office of mayor in November at the annual election.

THE FINAL SCENE at the door of the hotel as the casket was lifted from the hearse and carried to the suite of the mayor. Many stood in silent tribute as the policemen and bearers slowly filed in with the body of their former chief.

Tribute by Mayor Van Zandt was paid yesterday by the Board of Trustees of the Rochester Bureau of Municipal Research. In the resolutions that were adopted by the board, Mayor Van Zandt and Stephen B. Story, director of the Bureau of Municipal Research, acted in close cooperation.

The resolutions are as follows:

On June 17th the presiding officer of our board, Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt, answered the last Divine call. In considering the problems presented to this board, Mr. Van Zandt brought to bear his cardinal belief that the first, the highest, the fair thing should be done, and that which would move forward the business of the city on the highest plane. He gave as thorough an application to the procedures and government as excellent a business quality that the members of this board in full measure deplore the absence of his assistance.

Resolved by the board of Estimate and Appoinment that the foregoing statement be spread upon the minutes as a token of our grief and that the sympathy and heartfelt comm-iserations of the members of this board be extended to the family of Clarence D. Van Zandt.

Expression by Women.

Officers of the Women's Division of the Monroe County Republican County Committee, composed of Lillian R. Jones, chairman; Olive Gostell, secre-tary; Katherine Swanton, treasurer, and Anna Kimmell, corresponding secretary, adopted the following resolutions on Mayor Van Zandt's death:

WHEREAS, in the passing of our esteemed Mayor, Clarence D. Van Zandt, the City of Rochester has suffered the loss of a faithful official, and the Republican party a staunch adherent.

Be it resolved, That the Women's Division of the Monroe Republican County Committee does hereby extend our deepest sympathy to the family and to the close personal friends of Mr. Van Zandt in the grief which they are called upon to bear.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to Mrs. Clarence C. Keehn, the daughter of Mayor Van Zandt and, also, that a copy be inscribed upon the minutes of this organization.

The board, in an extend which can be but poorly expressed in words, conveys to his daughter, Mrs. Keehn, its sincere sympathy and to the City of Rochester this expression of its sorrow at the passing of an able and an efficient chief executive.

Estimate Board Acts. Resolutions on the death of Mayor Van Zandt were adopted yesterday by the Board of Estimate and Appoin-tment. A winning personality and a charming presence served as a fitting garment to display the high quality of his character which so greatly endeared him to us.

Resolved by the board of Estimate and Appoinment that the foregoing statement be spread upon the minutes as a token of our grief and that the sympathy and heartfelt comm-iserations of the members of this board be extended to the family of Clarence D. Van Zandt.

The board, in an extend which can be but poorly expressed in words, conveys to his daughter, Mrs. Keehn, its sincere sympathy and to the City of Rochester this expression of its sorrow at the passing of an able and an efficient chief executive.

Estimate Board Acts. Resolutions on the death of Mayor Van Zandt were adopted yesterday by the Board of Estimate and Appoin-tment. Mayor Van Zandt was the presiding officer of the board, and is succeeded by Mayor Martin B. O'Neil. The board is now composed of Mayor O'Neil, Comptroller Joseph C. Wilson, Frederick T. Pierson, president of the Common Council, Corporation Counsel Clarence M. Platt, and City Engineer C. Arthur Pools.

The resolutions are as follows:

On June 17th the presiding officer of our board, Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt, answered the last Divine call. In considering the problems presented to this board, Mr. Van Zandt brought to bear his cardinal belief that the first, the highest, the fair thing should be done, and that which would move forward the business of the city on the highest plane. He gave as thorough an application to the procedures and government as excellent a business quality that the members of this board in full measure deplore the absence of his assistance.

A winning personality and a charming presence served as a fitting garment to display the high quality of his character which so greatly endeared him to us.

Resolved by the board of Estimate and Appoinment that the foregoing statement be spread upon the minutes as a token of our grief and that the sympathy and heartfelt comm-iserations of the members of this board be extended to the family of Clarence D. Van Zandt.

The board, in an extend which can be but poorly expressed in words, conveys to his daughter, Mrs. Keehn, its sincere sympathy and to the City of Rochester this expression of its sorrow at the passing of an able and an efficient chief executive.

It takes more workers to construct a modern home than were employed by King Solomon to build his costly temple in Jerusalem, declared C. Storrs Barrows, local architect and president of the Lions Club, who addressed his fellow members of the club at the luncheon at the Osburn House Thursday noon.

The men behind the scenes, who supply the materials with which the home of today is constructed, number more than the army of 30,000 which cut the cedars in the forests of Lebanon and quarried the stone that formed the walls of Zalman's temple.

Crowd Surges INTO CHURCH AT FUNERAL

The seating capacity of Christ Episcopal Church in East Avenue failed to hold all those who stormed the 2nd Avenue entrance to attend the funeral service for Mayor Clarence D. Van Zandt yesterday afternoon.

The surging crowd, following close behind the last file of the long funeral procession, threatened to unlace the iron gates when policemen on guard admitted the spectators.

Unforeseen police and detectives stationed at the gate narrowly escaped being swept off their feet, avoiding falling only by closing the gates and retreating the crowd in dribs.

The plaza of the Rochester Club, diagonally across from the entrance to the church, was congested with club members, who took advantage of the elevated position to view the arrival and departure of the cortege.
The death of Dr. Applegarth removes one of the able, widely known and universally honored ministers of his denomination. He filled important pulpits in various cities, served as trustee of several theological seminaries, including that in Rochester, was secretary of the Baptist Foreign Mission Society, and as a lecturer in Scriptural exercises was in demand. One of the pastors he filled with high distinction was that of the Euclid Avenue Church in Cleveland; and his warm relations with his parishioner, John D. Rockefeller, contributed, as such things do, to bring his pulpit utterances to the general attention their wisdom and eloquence deserved.

For Dr. Applegarth impressed, as we believe, all thoughtful people privileged to hear him as a gifted, broad-minded preacher, serene in his outlook on the world, tolerant in his wisdom and able to illumine without heat even controversial subjects on which he spoke. It seems not too much to say that hearers carried away from his discourses something of new, impressive, striking thought, either in its substance or its presentation. In this city his last pastorate was served, and thereafter he was invited to many pulpits as a supply sure to be heard with interest and profit; and we fancy he was generally classed, along with Dr. Barbour, Dr. Welfkin, Dr. Joseph Fort Newton as one of the leading lights his great denomination had given the country in recent decades.

P.O. C. Children.
Aug. 14, 1919

Miss Alice L. Fitzgerald, formerly in charge of Dr. Ralph R. Fitch's hospital for crippled children in Brighton, and later in charge of the Boy's Club's convalescent hospital for crippled children at the Infants' Summer Hospital in the Twenty-third ward, died at the home of her mother, Mrs. Thomas Fitzgerald, in Lakefield, Ont., on August 6th, after an illness of several months.

Miss Fitzgerald was born in Lakefield, and spent all her life there until she came to Rochester some years ago to study up nursing. She was graduated from the high school at Peterboro, Ont. She came directly from the Peterboro school to the Rochester General Hospital Training School from which she was graduated in 1905. Shortly after her graduation she joined the nursing staff of andaigua, where she remained about a year, resigning that position to take charge of Dr. Fitch's hospital. She held this position for eight years.

During the World war she enlisted in Mass Hospital No. 19. In June, 1918, she went overseas. After the armaand was sent to Nancy, France, in January, 1919.

Rochester and for a year was a mem-er of the staff of the Rochester Pub-

Forty years ago he entered business with his father. Nearly twenty years ago, his son, Carl R. Bausch, entered into business with him and within a few years started the store in East avenue. Recently he returned to the main store in Main street east. The elder Mr. Bausch was president of the company, which was continued under the name of E. E. Bausch & Son Company, and his son, Carl, became vice-president and treasurer. The son had been active charge in the business for the last fifteen years.

George R. Bausch
Mr. Bausch was a member of the Chamber of Commerce, the Rochester Club, the Rochester Yacht Club, the Automobile Club of Rochester, the American Optometric Association, the New York State Optometric Society and the Rochester Optometric Society and had been a director in each. Ward, who, at the time of his death, was connected with Ward’s Natural Science Establishment in College avenue. The company of which Mr. Ward was the president was founded by his great-grandfather, Levi A. Ward, in 1821.

Succumbs to Pneumonia; Born at Pittsford, October 20, 1855.

Resided in Washington Since Retirement for Age in 1919.

Fullam died yesterday morning while the instrument still vibrated with her last chords. "If I could only die at the organ," members of her family had heard her say so often that grief could not obliterate her words from memory. "I had always been her wish," said a sister yesterday. Desired Musician.

Mrs. Schuhart had planned for 8 o'clock mass, and stayed after the service to look over music she intended to play at a wedding to-day in the church. Her family had feared that going every morning, as was her custom, to play for early mass, was too great a demand on her strength, as her duties as organist did not require it, but she replied, "I love to do it." At another time she said, "If I ever give up the organ, it will be because I have passed on while playing it."

While Mrs. Schuhart was practicing yesterday, Rev. John P. Schellhorn, rector, was downstairs in the church and, hearing the organ give out the notes for some time, he thought something was amiss with the instrument. Looking up to the choir loft, he saw Mrs. Schuhart leaning forward over the keys. He called to her, but she did not answer. The priest approached the instrument and saw the director of his choir had passed to "the choir invisible." The physician called and said that death was due to a heart attack.

Her Work Finished.

On Tuesday evening she rode to Pittsford with her daughters. They had recently repaired that house in Clifford avenue exactly as Mrs. Schuhart had wished it to be. "I am so happy with you girls," the mother said. "Once home now in precisely as I had wanted it to be."

The church had recently installed a new organ, Mrs. Schuhart directing the choir, in which she took special pride, and the singers' work of late had been gratifying. "It seems as if everything she had wished to do had been finished," said a relative.

Mrs. Schuhart had played an organ since she was 16 years old. After studying with the best teachers she could find there in Auburn, her native town, she attended the conservatory of music at the University of Syracuse. Miss Mary J. Olheiser was her name then. After her marriage to the late Dr. Q. C. Schuhart, she discontinued playing in church for a few years. Her husband opposed her taking up her music again as a profession, but she urged that her life would be that much nearer complete if she might. He consented, and became proud of her attainments. Dr. Schuhart died nine years ago this month.

Mrs. Schuhart leaves three children, one son, Herbert; two daughters, Marie and Bernadette, and five grand-children, all of this city; her mother, Mrs. George Olheiser; four sisters, Mrs. D. V. Harrington, Mrs. Frank Cockerell, and Mrs. Fred Maywald, and Mrs. John Rafter of Rochester.

The funeral will take place on Saturday morning at 9:30 o'clock at the home, No. 50 Clifford avenue, and at 10 o'clock at the Church of Our Lady of Perpetual Help, in the Church of Sacred Heart, Mrs. Schuhart's church. She will chant liturgical portions of the solemn mass of requiem.
C. F. BOYLAN, Distinguished Musician, Dies

Prominent in Rochester's Music Circles Score of Years Ago.

OUTED ORGANIST

Origin of Successful Voice Culture System Brought Him Fame.

Charles F. Boylan, for years a prominent musician and music teacher of Rochester, and one of the last survivors of the musical pioneers who helped to mark Rochester as a city of culture twenty or more years ago, died last evening at the Knorr Convalescent Home in Troup street. He was about 55 years old.

Mr. Boylan, who was generally known as "Professor" Boylan in music circles, was for years one of the best known music teachers in this part of the state. He perfected a teaching system that developed many singers of high standing in this community and elsewhere and that gave him recognition far beyond the city's boundaries. Some of the best known singers in Rochester churches, and many who have won success in other fields, owe their training to Mr. Boylan.

Developed Voice Training System.

In his early career, Mr. Boylan was known as a pianist and organist of uncommon talent, and most of his pupils specialized in piano. Later he developed a system of voice training which was so effective that he gradually turned from piano instruction, and in later years he was occasionally taken pupils for that instrument. For many years Mr. Boylan was organist at the First Church of Christ, Scientist.

It was frequently said of Mr. Boylan by his pupils, that his success as a teacher was due as much to his personal interest and his sympathetic treatment of individual problems as to his course of instruction. He had a knack of winning the affection of those who came under his instruction and inspiring them through the desire to win his approbation. To take part in a "Boylan recital" had come to have almost as much significance as a professional debut.

Mr. Boylan had a strong aversion for what he termed "musical fads," but he was not insensible to the value of new methods and new forms of musical expression, and he made it a point to keep abreast of modern compositions, many of which he introduced in his recitals.

Charles F. Boylan.

Musician Passes

In the musical life of Rochester a generation ago Mr. Boylan was an influential figure, a member of the same school of musicians that produced the late Professor Hervin Wilkins, a name well known to older residents of the city. For years he had maintained a studio in the Sibley block, but a number of years ago removed to the Cornell building, where he since had his headquarters. For some time he had been a patient of the Knorr Convalescent Home. He frequently spent his summers at East Bloomfield.

Friends will complete arrangements for the funeral to-day.

DEATH CLAIMS LAST OFFICER OF OLD 108TH

Alfred Elwood Promoted to Captaincy in Service During Civil War.

Alfred Elwood, the last surviving commissioned officer of the old "Fighting 108" New York Infantry, died yesterday morning at his home, No. 35 Crossman terrace, aged 84 years. Mr. Elwood enlisted with the 108th Infantry as sergeant on July 24, 1862. He was wounded in action at Antietam in September, 1862, and the following year received wounds at the Battle of Gettysburg, and in 1864 at Cold Harbor. He was captured in action at Roanoke Station, Va., in August, 1864, and later escaped, for several days hiding in the woods before being able to return to his lines.

Mr. Elwood was promoted to first sergeant a month after his escape and the following year he was commissioned second lieutenant. At the end of the war Mr. Elwood was appointed captain of his company. He was active in G. A. R. circles, being a member of George H. Thomas Post, and in 1898 at the annual convention of the Union Veterans' Union he was elected department commander.

Mr. Elwood was born in Stokenon, Trent, England, on July 6, 1832, and at the age of 9 years he came to Rochester with his parents. He retired from active business more than thirty years ago.

At the annual reunion of the 108th Regiment last August, Mr. Elwood was one of the three surviving members to attend. He leaves a son, Charles A. Elwood, and a daughter, Mrs. Emma J. MaceNill, both of this city.

Funeral services will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock at the home of Rev. Albert W. Heaven, D. D., minister of the Lake Avenue Baptist Church, of which Mr. Elwood was an active member for many years, will officiate. Interment will be made in Mount Hope cemetery.
FORMER FIRE CHIEF LITTLE DIES OF HURTS

Injuries Received in Crash of Automobile and Street

Car Fatal to Veteran.

1926

SPLENDID RECORD

Firefighter from 1873 to 1922, Battling at City's Largest Blazes.

Charles Little, of No. 289 Rugby avenue, former chief for many years of the Rochester Fire Department, died at 7:25 o'clock last night at the Genesee Hospital, of injuries received late Thursday afternoon when a street car left the tracks in Bay street and crashed against the automobile in which he was riding with his daughter, Miss Grace Little. Hospital physicians said death was due to shock and head injuries. Mr. Little was 72 years old.

Miss Little was driving her sedan west in Bay street, the police say, when a trolley car operated by Thomas Gaffney of No. 145 Holley street, ran into an open switch, leaped the track and crashed against her machine. The force of the impact hurled the automobile over the curb and overturned it on the sidewalk. Miss Little suffered from bruises, lacerations and shock, and was removed to the hospital in the ambulance with her father. Her condition was reported last night as not serious.

Mr. Little was born at No. 62 Wilder street on September 10, 1854. He was appointed to the fire department on July 16, 1878, as a minute man. He was assigned to Truck No. 1 and three years later became assistant foreman of his company. When Hose No. 5 was formed in 1884, he was made foreman of that company, and the following year he was transferred to the foremanship of Hose No. 9.

When the department was reorganized his title was changed to captain, and on April 9, 1884, he was appointed battalion chief. He served in that capacity until April 1, 1906, when he became chief of the department, succeeding Chief James Malcolm.

In his career in the department Chief Little fought two of the largest fires in the city's history. One was the Granite building fire in the winter of 1904, which he always considered one of the worst he ever had to contend with. He remained at the fire from 6 o'clock in the morning until 3 o'clock the following morning, then went home for a rest. When he arrived home, he felt so tired that he could not sleep. He dressed and returned to the scene of the fire and remained an on call until the following morning. His other most difficult fire was the big blaze at Main street east and Gibbs street in 1909.

It was mainly through Chief Little's efforts that the Central avenue fire headquarters was established. He always was proud to say that during the period that he was chief the department lost only one man, Lieutenant Fitzgerald, who was electrocuted when he came in contact with an ungrounded power distributor while fighting a fire in the cellar of an electric store in Main street.

Mr. Little and his widows have always taken an active interest in the department. He attended conventions of fire department officials and at one time served as vice-president of the National Association of Fire Engineers. Although he maintained strict discipline, Mr. Little always was popular with members of the department. He was utterly fearless, and he never ordered a fireman into any danger which he himself would not willingly face.

Upon his resignation from active duty on January 1, 1922, when he was succeeded by Frank A. Jaques as chief, Mr. Little said:

"I have been chief of the Rochester Fire Department for eighteen years and nine months, which is considerably longer than any other chief has held that position. During that time I strove to do my best, and it will be for others to tell whether I have succeeded."
I. G. SCRAMTON, SON OF EARLY PIONEER, DIES

Grandfather Erected Cabin on Site Where Powers Building Stands

LONG IN BUSINESS

First with Scrantom's, Inc., Founder, and Afterward with Hayden Company

Isaac Gridley Scrantom, a direct descendant of Seventeenth Century American settlers, and a son of one of the first residents of the little frontier colony that is now Rochester, yesterday died at his home at No. 27 Stratathallan park, aged 76 years. Mr. Scrantom had been in ill health for some time.

Until his retirement from active business seven years ago, Mr. Scrantom was vice-president of the Hayden Company, with which concern he had been associated for the greater number of his years of business life. He leaves his wife and two sons, Isaac Elbert Scrantom, president of the Hayden Company, and De Hart Gridley Scrantom of Maplewood, N. J.

Born Here in 1850.

Mr. Scrantom had lived most of his life in Rochester. Born on March 24, 1850, he was educated in the public schools of this city. At the conclusion of his schooling he was associated with his brother, Henry Scramton, founder of the present firm of Scrantom's, Inc. As left that business when a young man to become connected with J. E. Hayden, founder of the Hayden Company, furniture manufacturers and decorators.

The descendants of Mr. Scrantom are traced easily back to the early days in Massachusetts when John Scrantom, from Guilford, Surrey, England, arrived with a group of his fellow Englishmen in Boston June 20, 1677. With other settlers, Scrantom established a small colony not far from Boston, which was known as Guilford, the name being adopted from the place in England from which these sturdy men and women had come.

In the early days of the Nineteenth Century, Hamlet Scrantom, grandfather of the deceased, deeply imbued with the pioneer spirit, moved from his home in Durham, Conn., to the western frontier, the outpost of which in those days was Western New York. Hamlet Scrantom, with his small family, including one child which was Elbert W. Scrantom, made a small clearing in what is now the heart of Rochester and with arduous labor erected a log cabin on the site where Powers Hotel now stands.

I. GRIDLEY SCRANTON.

The occupation of Hamlet Scrantom was milling; and he practised this until, with the acquisition of new wealth, he moved to a larger clearing and a more pretentious log cabin, still not more than a few minutes walk from the present Four Corners. In this second cabin, Elbert W. Scrantom, father of the deceased, was born.

Devoted to Family.

The life of Isaac Gridley Scrantom was dedicated jointly to his home and to his business. His active interest beyond these two was the Church, and for many years he served as vestryman in Christ Church. He was a quiet, unassuming man, whose most marked characteristic was his whole-souled devotion to his family.

"Mr. Scrantom was no ideal home man," said a long associate of the deceased yesterday. "Directly descended from men who laid the foundations of the American home, he found in this institution his greatest comfort and pleasure. His tastes were simple. Although a most capable business executive, his friends—his real friends—will remember him mostly because of his sterling qualities as a father and husband. His life was beautiful in its devotion to his family."

On account of his ability as an organizer, Mr. Scrantom was selected for the important task of establishing the Hayden Company in New York city in 1874. At the beginning of this work, Mr. Scrantom moved to New York city, and lived there and in Mount Vernon, N. Y., for eighteen years, returning to this city finally to fill the position of vice-president of the Hayden Company.

Observe Golden Wedding.

Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Scrantom celebrated their golden wedding anniversary, and at that time they received the congratulations of not only many of the older residents of this city, but of men and women who had become acquainted with the Scrantoms in their residence in New York and Mount Vernon.

The wedding will be private and will take place as the home tomorrow.

DR. OWEN E. JONES.

MEDICAL MEN PAY TRIBUTE TO DR. JONES

Unusual Skill and Charming Personality Among His Characteristics.

Tributes to Dr. Owen E. Jones, prominent surgeon, who died yesterday, were paid last night by Rochester physicians and surgeons who have been associated with him in his work. Among those to offer regret and appreciation of Dr. Jones and his work last night were the following:

Dr. Warren Wexler, vice-president of the Medical Society of Monroe and associated with Dr. Jones in his practice for the past twelve years: "An attempt to represent the feelings of the Medical Society of the county of Monroe on the occasion of the death of its most distinguished member requires but little reference to the life and work of Dr. D. E. Jones in view of his wide-spread influence among the profession and the respect of his professional relations with thousands of people of Rochester.

Developed Rapidly.

"Born in Frankfort, N. Y., educated in Fairfield Academy and graduated from the Albany Medical College in 1864, Dr. Jones began in 1865 a medical practice in this city which rapidly became one of the largest and most successful in terms of service of a high order to his fellow citizens. Gradually these results from this enormous general practice of incessant demand, evidence of a superior ability in professional work, produced him and a talented dexterity of hand, in the computer of surgical cases, which, ably from merit recognized by medical associates, resulted in his establishment as one of the leading surgeons of Central and Western New York."

"Not content with the limitations of personal service regardless of its high order, the last twenty-five years of Dr. O. E. Jones activities have been most successfully the wider fields of professional service. Respect and recognition of medical and its consideration of the problems of preventive medicine, public health and increased standards of scientific medical practice. Great self-sacrifice and almost unyielding devotion to the numerous responsibilities attendant upon holding practically one's profession was the keynote of the service of Dr. Jones. To a devoted family, to a devoted city, to the profession, to every medical officer in the gift of his own city and county, ultimately resulted in his election in 1924 to the presidency of the second largest medical society in the world, the Medical Society of the State of New York, an organization of 12,000 members, many of whom knew their president intimately and all of whom held in high regard the reputation of this citizen of Rochester who had attained such merited eminence in his professional life."

Dr. Christopher G. Parmaul, medical director of the Presbyterian General Hospital—"Of a cheerful and equable nature, Dr. Jones endeared himself alike to his patients and to his associates. In addition to other high qualities, he possessed a high devotion to his profession and continued to give of his skill and knowledge almost to the end, in spite of an illness which would have caused the courage of a man of lesser determination."

Dr. John Primpson of the surgical staff of St. Mary's Hospital—"Dr. Jones was a man we could ill afford to lose; a most interesting general practitioner."

Dr. Floyd S. Winslow—"Dr. Jones rose to position of high prominence in the surgical world through a combination of native skill and a determined character. He was a man who by doing all his extensive contributions to the public life of Rochester, he will be great in the profession, but by the "hole city."

"Steameh Friend." "Dr. John A. Stapleton—Dr. Jones was an outstanding surgeon; in the investment of his skill, he was a man of sterling character, and a staunch friend to hundreds of persons. It was in keeping with his character that he continued to exert an influence to the last in spite of a deep-seated illness."

Dr. Walter A. French—"A man of Dr. Jones, and still forth righting in the ranks of the medical profession of Rochester and New York State, Dr. Jones' efforts, helpful in the progress of the medical profession of the state, have made him many friends who will "truly mourn his loss."

Body of Congressman Wadsworth Laid to Rest Beneath Elms of Loved Valley

By STAFF CORRESPONDENT.

Geneseo, Dec. 20.—The mortal remains of the man whom the late August Belmont once characterized as a number of rising men in New York City as the "finest type of American gentlemen," were given to the custody of two great elms which spread their gnarled branches over the little hedge-lined plot of the Wadsworth family in Temple Hill cemetery today.

A parade abroad lay gently over the hills of the Upper Genesee country as the body of Genesee's beloved Congressman, James W. Wadsworth, Sr., whose death occurred in Washington Friday night, was lowered into its final place of sleep in the successful accomplishment of race, rewarded by many a man in the uniform of the military services of the country.

Flag Flung on Casket.

There was a momentary pause as the echo of the bugle swept forth in the chill winter air and shot from the organ at the grave of an elderly man shrouded forth in a small American flag on the start of a cortege which formed the banner lines of the wooden casket.

"In behalf of those who fought to preserve the integrity of our glorious country. Let this be the casket of one of our comrades, a great friend, and a great leader," said the inquiring bugler. "Here, and fare thee well!"

George Williams, lifelong friend of the late Congressman, and a member with him of the Federal Army in Northern days of the great Civil war, moved back into the crowd of dark-gowned men and touched his eye with a handkerchief. A woman's sob was heard. And then the last rites of mortal were begun.

The country folk who had known the elderly Congressman for periods depending upon their own years in the Genesee valley conversed in groups with political dignitaries and men high in the social and financial strata of the country who came to little St. Mike's Episcopal Church to pay their final respects to a man, who, although a gentleman in the sense that the word is understood in European countries, nevertheless preserved deep and strong in his being the spirit of true democracy.

Hundreds View Body.

The body of the Congressman, which was brought on in a special car which also bore the members of Mr. Wadsworth's immediate family, lay in state in the early part of the day in the little chapel of the church, and there it was viewed by hundreds of persons both from this village and countryside and many of the great centers of the East.

It was difficult for many of these men and women to realize that the tall, active figure of their friend had been stilled forever. They knew well the rugged strength of the old politician, sportsman and farmer. The mounting years had rested as lightly as a soiled mantle upon this kindly old gentleman, who despite his fourscore years had retained a keen enthusiasm for life and eagerly participated in it.

"Hear my prayers, O Lord, and give ear unto my cry; hold not thy peace at my tears: for I am a stranger with thee, and a sojourner, as all my fathers were."

From the Thirty-third Psalm, read Rev. J. W. Dunshee Cooper, rector of St. Michael's Church, after the foregoing address had been moved up the side of the church, the nave of which was filled beyond its seating capacity. The rector ended, and the funeral cortege moved out to the little graveyard, on a hill above the village. Here many of the elderly members of the family of Wadsworth are buried, under the drooping branches of the great elms, and here the body of James W. Wadsworth, Sr., was laid side by side with that of his father.

Friends from Many Fields.

It was fitting that the active bearers of the casket should be members of the Genesee town baseball club, an organization which was started many years ago and supported the height of its success, by the old Congressman. He was ever a patron of sports and until an injury sustained twenty years ago by a fall from a trolley, shortened the range of his own physical exercises, an ardent participator in them.

In the crowd that filled the little church were many men who knew the Congressman best during the years that he was actively interested in baseball and fox hunting. There were others who had been associated with him in the conduct of his great farm ranging over this valley country for thousands of acres. They spoke of him to the ideal farmer, a man who was never closest to him because of his interest and support of racing, for "Congressman Jim," was the first and only chairman the racing board of New York state had ever known. And there were others who knew him best as an astute financier. But everyone who knew him at all, called him "friend!"

Major Wadsworth, Jr.

Genuine sorrow is reflected in comments from the Genesee Country on the death of Major James Wadsworth, Sr., former representative in Congress, veteran of the Civil war, and a citizen of outstanding character.

To hundreds of his neighbors in the Valley his sudden passing comes as a personal loss. To thousands of others, who had known him less intemly, the news of his unexpected death brings a distinct shock.

Major Wadsworth was one of those rare leaders of men who continued to face life with the eager zest of youth long after the period when men seek quiet in retirement. His four score years seemed to weigh lightly on a spirit ever ready for fresh adventure. His interest to the last was as keen in affairs of to-day as in the victories and defeats of a former era. A true sportsman, he evinced keen delight in a clean fight and knew how to concede a point gracefully to those whose views differed from his own.

As a leader in civic affairs, a soldier, an officer of the state government, a representative in Congress, Major Wadsworth served the interests of his fellow citizens manfully and well. He was not easily led astray by glittering promises, yet he was not a foe of progress. For the things he believed right he was willing to fight to the end.

But it is as a friend and neighbor that his will be most sincerely mourned in the villages, the hamlets, the lonely farmhouses where he had been a familiar figure for many years. As a true test of his character surely nothing more than that could be demanded.

MRS. PUFFER, 85, LONG FRIEND OF LINCOLN, DIES

Met Him When School Girl; Considered Authority on His Early Life

\[ JAN, 16, 1827.\]

Mrs. M. C. (Grace) Puffer, one of a few women to have been personally acquainted with Lincoln for many years, died yesterday of heart failure at her home, 36 North Goodman street.

Mrs. Puffer was born on December 25, 1841, in Winchester, Ill., a daughter of Starke R. Powell, who was associated quite intimately with Lincoln in the Black Hawk Indian war, when Lincoln was a private citizen and a soldier.

Mrs. Puffer was present at Lincoln's last appearance at the Lincoln-Douglas debate, when she was a school girl. She also attended with her father a presidential campaign gathering at which Lincoln free from the cares and duties of the Presidency. Among the many treasures that Mrs. Puffer cherished was a Lincoln handkerchief of the first presidential campaign in which he was elected, and a photograph of Lincoln which he gave her and on the back of which he wrote his name.

Mrs. Puffer often related the experiences told her by her father which he was in close contact with Lincoln. One story she vividly remembered was the story of an old, disreputable Indian who strayed into her father's camp; a story that has become a classic. The other soldiers thought he was a spy, she related, and he never would have left the camp alive, but Lincoln lifted his arm and held it over him until he was safely out of camp.

During Lincoln's visit to her father's home, she often showed him her playthings, among them being a toy kitten which he some how had from her to make her believe it was too large for her.

Mrs. Puffer came to Rochester in 1860 and resided here ever since. She was well known in literary circles. She was considered an authority on the early days of Rochester and the author of several short sketches and articles on her early days in Rochester.

Mrs. Puffer leaves her son, N. Powell Puffer, of Charleston, West Va., former Rochester newspaper man, and four grandchildren managing editor of the Evening Times. Albert Flannery Memorial

Albert M. Flannery, late secretary to Mayor Martin B. O'Neil, was attended at 9 o'clock yesterday morning at St. Patrick's Cathedral by virtually every official in Rochester's government. He died at the Powers Hotel at midnight, and appeared in the best of health and spirits. He passed the early evening at the fire house in Central avenue, with Alderman William J. Ward, floor leader of the Common Council, preparatory to going to the annual dinner of the Protective.

Press Club Resolution

The Board of Governors of the Rochester Press Club yesterday adopted the following resolution:

"Albert M. Flannery was long and actively identified with the activities of the Rochester Press Club. As a newspaper worker, he was interested in the affairs of his fellow newspaper men and women, and at all times displayed a willingness to participate in the work of the club. His cooperation was appreciated, and his counsel was frequently sought by the members."

For a number of years he served as treasurer of the club, being unanimously re-elected at succeeding elections until his appointment as secretary to the mayor made him ineligible to hold office in the club.

"In the passing of Mr. Flannery, newspaper men and women have lost a loyal friend, and the Rochester Press Club has lost a respected member."

Many Friends at the Funeral of A. M. Flannery

Funeral services for Albert M. Flannery, late secretary to Mayor Martin B. O'Neil, were attended at 9 o'clock yesterday morning at St. Patrick's Cathedral by virtually every official in Rochester's government. Augmented the size of the congregation, a large number of Rochester's officials were scores of personal friends, embracing virtually every line of endeavor, many of whom knew Mr. Flannery through his twenty-five years of newspaper work, and five years as secretary to the mayor.

The funeral, one of the largest Rochester has seen in recent months, gave opportunity to almost too much respect of many friends of Mr. Flannery, could pay him. In the Commonwealth, the largest number of Rochester officials, with which organization Mr. Flannery was identified for years, represented the Rochester Council, Knights of Columbus, and the Rochester Press Club. Many police and fire men were also present.

Solomonic High Mass

Solomonic high requiem mass was celebrated by Rev. Charles F. Shar, rector of the cathedral, assisted by Rev. Joseph T. Sharp, Director of the Dominican Institute, as deacon, and Rev. James B. Keenan, of the cathedral, as sub-deacon. In the sanctuary were R. V. Musgrove, Francis O'Hara, and Rev. C. J. Van der Meulen, Charles Britton, George V. Buse, Walter B. McCarthy, Francis Kelly, Philip Golding, William Stander, Adrian Schneider, and Raymond Lyman of St. Stephen's Church, Gene-

The Bearers were William Raftery, Charles C. Park, Ross Evens, Glenn Byers, David Condon, and William H. O'Neil.
Successful newspaper men often are called upon to be the secretaries or executive assistants to public officials; in part because the practice of their profession gives them the contacts with all kinds of people which are the daily work of the public official, and in part because their success in meeting these contacts develops qualities that are indispensable in the proper conduct of public office.

The death of Albert M. Flannery, secretary to the Mayor since the first term of Mayor Van Zandt, removes a man who particularly well met the requirements both of success in newspaper work and of success in the public service.

Absolute, quickly recognized integrity, the prime requisite in both fields; judgment and honor in respecting confidences, a first tenet in the newspaper man's creed and in trained assistants to public men; tact in dealing with all sorts of people—these were the qualities that made Mr. Flannery a newspaper man particularly respected in his profession and generally respected outside of it. Both the newspaper profession and the city administration will feel his loss keenly.

SAMUEL B. WILLIAMS DIES, AGED 83 YEARS; FMR. CITY OFFICIAL

Expressing Brief Illness in Home in Meigs Street; Active in Many Fraternal Circles

Jan. 1927

Funeral services will take place on Thursday

Samuel Burbank Williams, former city official, Civil war veteran, and one of Rochester's most prominent citizens, died at 8:30 o'clock last night at his home, at No. 316 Meigs street, aged 83 years.

Mr. Williams, despite his advanced age, was active in private and public life until a few days before his death. He died following a brief illness. The death of Mr. Williams marks the passing of one of the last of a group closely associated with the public life and growth of the city nearly two score years ago.

Friend of Aldridge.

For nearly seventeen years he served as treasurer and comptroller of the city, and was a close personal friend of George W. Aldridge. He was a prominent Mason, and served sixty-one years as a member of the Protective.

Mr. Williams was a personal friend of President Coolidge, and took part in a Williams College ceremony with the President when Mr. Coolidge was governor of Massachusetts. He has received two personal letters from the President in the last few years.

Born in Deerfield, Franklin county, Mass., on October 13, 1843, Mr. Williams came to Rochester with his parents in April, 1857. In December, 1863, when only a little more than 20 years of age, Mr. Williams enlisted as a private in Company L, 50th New York Engineers. For the rest of the Civil War he served in the Engineer Brigade of the Army of the Potomac.

In January, 1867, Mr. Williams joined his father-in-law, R. N. Warfield, junior member of the oil firm of George Arnold Company, in forming the firm of Warfield & Company. He began his public career with his election to the old Executive Board in 1882.

He was a member of the Brick Presbyterian Church since 1860, was a member of the church for thirty years, and was secretary and treasurer of the primary department for thirty-four years.

Mr. Williams was secretary and treasurer of the Engineer Brigade, Army of the Potomac, for four years, a trustee of the Fireman's Home, at Hudson, N. Y., for twenty-one years, and was a charter member of the George H. Thomas Post, G. A. R.

He was at one time treasurer of eighteen organizations.

He was one of the organizers of the Masonic Temple Association of this city and was active in the erection of the present Masonic Temple. He was treasurer of the temple for twenty-two years.

Funeral services will take place...
When he was a member of the Executive Board Mr. Williams played an important part in blocking the attempt of the Western New York & Pennsylvania Railroad Company to cross West avenue at grade. The company obtained a temporary injunction, under which it was sought to prevent the city from interfering with the work of the railroad in removing a dam near the old Pennsylvania station. The injunction was served upon George W., Aldridge and Byron Halley, but Mr. Williams, the third member of the board, could not be found. He had been warned of the impending move by the railroad and disappeared.

For many days when feeling ran high and the railroad was threatening to carry out its plans, Mr. Williams was not to be found. But he was no farther away than times under a pile of lumber near where the railroad company was likely to start removing the dam in question.

The affair ended in a battle between railroad employees and the city Fire Department, called out to repel invaders. Then the matter was taken to the courts, and the city's interests were protected.

In 1885 Mr. Williams tried for a renomination to the Executive Board, but was beaten in convention by James M. Allenhead.

In 1893 Mr. Williams started his career as city treasurer. He was nominated at that time, later elected, and he continued that process until he became a candidate for comptroller in 1893. In 1895 and 1897 he had no opposition.

He recommended many changes in the treasurer's office, and many of them, especially in regard to unpaid taxes, were adopted. At one time he engineered a popular loan of $700,000 among the citizens of Rochester. The city had not then begun to sell its notes in the money markets of New York and Boston.

Mr. Williams had amusing stories to tell in connection with this loan. One of the subscribers was a retired clergyman. A few weeks after the notes were issued Mr. Williams befriended the man, thought, by giving him 25 cents for a printed copy of a sermon. When the clergyman asked for $200,000 worth of city notes, the city treasurer was skeptical enough to demand a certified check. The clergyman produced it.

On October 8, 1913, the Proteus Club held a celebration in memory of the city treasurer at fire headquarters. The occasion was the fifteenth anniversary of Mr. Williams' connection with the organization, and he was the guest of honor.

Mr. Williams joined the Proteus Club in 1909. He was first assistant fireman of the old fire company, and became fireman when Dwight H. Wren died in office. For three years he was financial secretary of the Proteus. He was also a trustee in the Fire Department of the City of Rochester and the Rochester representative in the Firemen's Home of Hudson.

When he wished to throw off the cares of business and public life, Mr. Williams went away with a fishing rod or a gun. He was particularly fond of hunting. "I would rather fish than eat," he used to say, "and I would much rather hunt than fish."

Mr. Williams was one of the first members of O'Keefe Post No. 1, G. A. R., and a charter member and past commander of George H. Thomas Post.

He was a member of Genesee Falls Lodge, Hamilton Chapter, Monroe Commandery, Dumas Temple, Rochester Consistory, of the Masons, and the Military Order of Loyal Legion, California Commandery; Colonial Wars Society; and Episcopal Governors.

On the December 9, 1925, Mr. and Mrs. Williams celebrated their sixtieth wedding anniversary at their home in Brigs Street. Mrs. Williams died a year ago.

Mrs. Fannie Rochester Rogers, widow of Clinton Rogers, and believed to have been the only surviving grandchild of Colonel Nathaniel Rochester, founder of Rochester, died yesterday morning at her home, 14 North Goodman Street, after an illness of several weeks.

Mrs. Rogers was born in Rochester in 1846, the daughter of Henry E. Rochester and Jane Hart Rochester. She was educated at Miss Eaton's private school and at Vassar College.

She was a lifelong member of St. Luke's Episcopal Church. For many years she served as president of the Church Home.

In 1878, she married Clinton Rogers. Four children, all of Rochester, survive. They are Mrs. Sidney Breese Roby, Mrs. Joseph Roby, Rochester. Hart Rogers and Miss Helen Rochester Rogers. Mrs. Rogers also leaves ten grandchildren.
