Savings Chief Ends 39 Years in Postoffice

RVP Rochester Biography-L
 His Yard and Garden To Keep Him Busy, Says Veteran

There was a quizzical smile on Ross Loughborough's visage as he pulled down the window on the postal savings cage in the postoffice last night at 5 o'clock.

For with that motion he ended more than 39 years of service in the postoffice, 25 of which have been in the postal savings department, and he didn't quite know how he felt about leaving his familiar place.

Under the compulsory age limit he is being retired, although his co-workers know him as "the youngest 65-year-old man in Rochester."

That doesn't mean that he is going to be idle, however. The yard and garden at his home at 348 Mulberry Street need lots of attention, he says. And he welcomes the opportunity to read and study history and geneology, his favorite hobbies.

He will also continue to teach a night class in citizenship at School 9, a job he has carried on for several years in addition to his work at the postoffice.

He was appointed a postal clerk Aug. 1, 1897. When the postal savings department was instituted in October, 1911, he was put in charge of that work in the Rochester office, and has continued in that position since that time.

As he left to go home last night the Rochester chapter of the National Federation of Postoffice Clerks presented him a handsome desk set with an engraved plate bearing his name.

Retiring with the old year was Ross Loughborough, right, clerk at the postoffice in charge of the postal savings window. He has been at the postoffice 39 years and yesterday, his last day before retirement, his associates presented him with a desk set. He will be succeeded by Charles J. Luehm, at left.

Dr. Frederick Losey, Shakespeare Lecturer, U. of R. Graduate, Dies

R. T. 2 June 6, 1932
 New York, June 5.—Dr. Frederick Douglas Losey, 65, who as an authority on Shakespeare had lectured in every state of the union, died today of heart disease.

Doctor Losey, a native of Conesus, N. Y., was graduated from the University of Rochester, where he had begun his career as an interpreter of the classics while still an undergraduate.

His last recital was at Colgate University on Apr. 27. Since 1916 he had devoted himself principally to Shakespearean lectures, although his reading of "The Christmas Carol" was an annual event in many colleges.

Doctor Losey founded the dramatic organization of Syracuse University, Boer's Head, and the Blackfriars of the University of Alabama.

He leaves a widow, Mrs. Marie L. Hart Losey, whom he married in Rochester in 1890, and a brother, the Rev. John B. Losey, of Pasadena, Calif.

HUNT PRESSED FOR DRIVER IN STREET DEATH

D. & C. JAN 21 1938
Family Arranges Charles Ludwig Funeral

As funeral arrangements were completed last night for Charles Ludwig Sr., 74, police pressed their search for the hit-run driver who left him dying in St. Paul St., where he was found by his son early yesterday.

Rites for Ludwig, Rochester's third traffic victim this year, who died at 2:10 a. m. in Highland Hospital, will be conducted at 2 p. m. Monday at his home, 18 Vick Pk. B. Burial will be in Mt. Hope Cemetery. Survivors are the son, Charles W. Ludwig Jr., a daughter, Mrs. Philip Ludwig, and three grandchildren.

The son, who lives at the Vick Pk. B address, halted his car in St. Paul St. near Hart shortly after 12:30 a. m. when he saw a body lying on the pavement. As he turned over the unconscious form he recognized his father, founder and for 18 years president of the German Club.

Arriving a few minutes later, Raymond Archer, 350 Monroe Ave., reported he was halted in St. Paul St. by a driver coming in the opposite direction on the wrong side of the street. When he stopped the car the other man asked him to call an ambulance, saying he had struck a pedestrian. As Archer called police from a nearby restaurant the man disappeared.

Police of Joseph Ave. Station said the hit-skip driver is about 25 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall and wore a uniform, cap and puttees such as worn by a service or parking station attendant or a chauffeur. His large black sedan bearing 1937 plates was battered, one headlight being turned around, Archer told them.

Archer was on his way home from the northern part of the city when he met the driver and later the younger Ludwig, a friend and employe at his motor agency. The elder Ludwig had been attending a meeting of the Badischer Mannerchor and apparently was crossing St. Paul St. to get a street car when felled. He was a retired piano dealer.

Canon Law Wins 3-Year Dispute; 6,123 Masses Slated for Dead Veteran

By JAMES B. HUTCHISON
INVOKING ancient canon laws, the Rochester Diocese of the Roman Catholic Church today brought peace to the soul of James W. Loucks, 90-year-old Civil War Veteran.
From war-torn China to the jungles of Africa, Catholic missionaries will celebrate 6,123 masses for the repose of Loucks' soul and that of his brother, Daniel, as the result of Archbishop Edward Mooney's efforts in unraveling legal knots that held up the rites for three and a half years after the veteran's death.

Story Unfolded
THE strange story of unswerving religious faith, that dates back to a pledge made at the Battle of Gettysburg, was unfolded in a decision of Judge George W. Pratt in Bath Surrogate's Court.

When the tall, white-bearded veteran died Jan. 18, 1934, at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home in Bath, he left the bulk of his $9,279 estate to be used for masses for himself and his brother, who died in 1930.

Under laws of the church, the masses should have been celebrated within a year after Louck's death. But nearly four years slipped past before a conflict between state and canon law ended in the establishment of a legal precedent, paving the way for fulfillment of the veteran's last wishes.

In the little hamlet of Manheim, in Herkimer County, James Loucks was born in 1844. When he was only 19 years old, he enlisted as a private in Company H, Second New York Heavy Artillery, formed at Utica to join the Union Army at the battlefield.

Marvels at Sisters
LOUCKS fought against the Confederate forces from Cold Harbor to Gettysburg, and during the fierce hand-to-hand battles marveled at the work of the Sisters of Charity in caring for the wounded and dying.

He became interested in the Catholic faith. When his company wheeled into action at Gettysburg, Loucks vowed that "if the Almighty God spares me in this war, I will become a Catholic."

The veteran's battlefield pledge was recounted by the Rev. Arthur A. LeMay, chaplain of the Soldiers' and Sailors' Home, who knew Loucks intimately during the last 15 years of the veteran's life.

When he was mustered out of service, Loucks went to Little Falls, where he lived on a farm near the city with his brother, Robert H. Loucks. Remembering his vow, Loucks studied the Catholic religion with the Rev. James Ludden, then pastor of St. Mary's Church in Little Falls.

He was converted to the faith and remained a communicant until his death. From 1877 to 1885, he was sexton of the church.

Never Married

LOUCKS never married. He was deeply religious and spent much of his leisure reading and studying,

SURROGATE GEO. W. PRATT

He untangled legal knot in Civil War veterans' will case.

according to Father LeMay. Thrifty, he saved nearly $10,000 from his wages as a farmers' helper, road worker and shoemaker.

Then in May, 1913, he was admitted to the Soldiers' Home at Bath at the age of 69.

Making his will July 28, 1928, Loucks bequeathed $200 to St. John's Orphan Asylum of Utica, $100 to the Sisters of St. Joseph in Little Falls, a trunk and three suitcases to a nephew, Alvarado Smith, and a gold watch and chain to another relative, Emerson Arnst of Gloversville.

After requesting to be buried in St. Mary's Cemetery, Little Falls, Loucks left the remainder of his money to the Herkimer County Trust Company "to be used and paid for masses for the repose of myself and my brother, Daniel."

Masses Delayed

PUZZLED by terms of the will, the bank president filed a petition for "judicial settlement" to determine whether the principal of the fund should be paid for masses or the income. Meanwhile, with legal proceedings dragging, no masses were celebrated.

Learning of the situation, Archbishop Mooney, through Attorney Eugene J. Dwyer entered the case on behalf of the Rochester Diocese. Canon law, Bishop Mooney pointed out, provided that if masses are not said within a year after death, the diocese shall take over the funds bequeathed for that purpose and see that terms of the will are carried out.

A unique question of law arose when the Herkimer Trust Company argued that under state law, as executor of Loucks' estate, it was entitled to dispose of the money as it saw fit.

Canon Law Prevails

COUNSEL for the bank notified Archbishop Edmund F. Gibbons of the Albany Diocese, who also joined the legal battle, contending the money should be used for masses in that diocese because Loucks was a life-long member of the Little Falls parish.

After lengthy arguments and a study of the canon law filed by Dwyer, Surrogate Pratt decided that canon law superseded state law in the case, because it was Loucks' intent to have the masses said in accordance with the customs of the church.

The entire fund of $6,123 must be expended for the masses, which are $1 each. Judge Pratt ruled, and not the income. He also held that because for 21 years Loucks attended church service in Bath, the money must be administered through the Rochester Diocese.

Although Loucks left a fund of $7,880 to be used for the masses, legal fees of $1,757 cut the amount to $6,123. Thus, through the expenses of the court proceedings, attorneys said, nearly 2,000 masses cannot be celebrated.

The Rev. William Bergan, chancellor of the Rochester Diocese, said today the $6,123 fund will be turned over to the Society for the Propagation of the Faith, which will distribute the money to foreign missions, where the masses will be said immediately.

Well Qualified

Rochester residents will view with satisfaction appointment of Robert T. Lansdale, son of the late Herbert P. Lansdale Sr., to the important post of state commissioner of Social Welfare. He succeeds the late David C. Adie and owes his designation to the State Board of Social Welfare. Times-Union JUN 15 1943

The new welfare commissioner is a graduate and former teacher of East High School, though in recent years a resident of New York City.

He combines a wide range of practical and administrative experience in welfare work with extended study and teaching in this field.

Commissioner Lansdale's father was one of Rochester best loved and most useful citizens. His brother, Herbert P. Lansdale Jr., now Rochester YMCA general secretary, long worked in Greece and is an authority on Balkan affairs.

Thus Robert T. Lansdale, in addition to his own ability and experience, comes from a family devoted to social service.

Named State Relief Head

Robert T. Lansdale, 43, former East High School instructor, today was appointed commissioner of social welfare for New York State at a salary of $12,000 yearly.

Appointment of Lansdale, director of the Institute of Welfare Research of Community Service Society of New York, fills the vacancy created by the death last February of David C. Adie.

Long Experience Cited

In announcing the appointment, Chairman Lawrence S. Greenbaum of the State Board of Social Welfare said Lansdale was chosen because of his more than 20 years experience in both public and private welfare work throughout the state, including New York City.

Born in Elmira, he is the son of the late Herbert P. Lansdale, former general secretary of the Rochester YMCA, and Mrs. Lansdale.

He was graduated from East High School and received his A. B. degree from Oberlin College, after which he returned to East High to teach English and Journalism. He left there in 1925 to enter the New York School for Social Work.

World War I Veteran

A World War I veteran, the new commissioner also served as director of the state and local organizing study of the New York Governor's Commission on Unemployment Relief, and for four years was assistant to the commissioner in the United States Office of Indian Affairs.

Lansdale holds an A. M. degree from Columbia University and is a member of the faculty of the New York School of Social Work of Columbia, in charge of public welfare administration courses.

His brother is Herbert P. Lansdale, who followed in the footsteps of his widely-known father and is at present general secretary of the YMCA here.

I'm for it. It makes for uniformity and that's an important thing.

It will give the have-nots of Europe a chance against the haves. I'm also in favor of the rehabilitation administration committee plan to name a director of health for Europe and the Far East to battle any possible epidemics coming in the wake of war.

City Knows His Caliber

Rochesterians will commend the State Board of Social Welfare for its choice of a former Rochesterian, Robert F. Lansdale, to succeed the late David T. Adie as state welfare commissioner. Mr. Lansdale, son of the late Herbert P. Lansdale and brother of YMCA General Secretary Herbert P. Lansdale Jr., is a graduate and former teacher at East High and lately has been director of research for the Community Service Society of New York City.

Herbert P. Lansdale, the elder, had a notable career as Y secretary here. The new central building and its branches were built under his leadership. His sons already have distinguished themselves in social service fields. The career of Herbert Jr., at Salonika, Greece, was marked by leadership which attracted the support of the leading statesmen of that country. Rochester well may be proud of the contributions of this father and the sons his character and ability inspired.

Self-Rule for Puerto Rico Opposed

A native of Puerto Rico, now enlisted in Rochester's army of war workers, today denounced President Roosevelt's proposal that Puerto Rico, a United States possession, be granted self-government.

Such action now, said Raefel Lopez, 539 S. Plymouth, a former teacher of Spanish, would not alleviate famine conditions on the Caribbean island, converted into an Atlantic "Gibraltar" for the defense of the Panama Canal, and would only result in a political blunder for Washington.

LOPEZ Denouncer

On Tuesday the President asked Congress to consider as soon as possible an amendment to Puerto Rico's organic law, permitting the people to elect their own governor. Reports of hunger and want in the territory, ruled by America for 45 years, spurred the President's action.

"The two million people in Puerto Rico are calling for food—not for the right to elect their own governor," the 32-year-old Puerto Rican declared. "Just because Puerto Rico will be self governing doesn't mean she can open up the sea lanes and let food come in."

"The whole matter should be a post-war problem. Right now such action might endanger the general war effort, because then the people would fall easy prey to Axis propaganda, which already has a foothold on the island.

Instead—Lopez would encourage the immigration and distribution of the overcrowded population to Central and South America—and even to the United States. He discussed the farm labor problem, saying "we could import farmers from Puerto Rico here. They could also help in war factories."

Death Takes Ex-Policeman

Herman F. Ludke, retired policeman of 21 Arnold Pk., died today in the Monroe County Infirmary.

Born in Germany he came to this country when a young man and was appointed to the Rochester Police Department Aug. 31, 1901. He was attached to the University Avenue Station for a number of years and retired about 10 years ago.

Ludke is survived by two daughters, Mary M. and Olga J. Ludke; a son, Carl H. Ludke, five sisters and a brother.

The body was taken to Corbett Funeral Chapel, 756 Main St. E. Funeral services will be held Monday morning at 11 o'clock. Interment will take place in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

Military Rites Slated For Charles Leone

Military funeral rites will be held tomorrow at 8:30 a. m. at the funeral home of D. F. Emma, 54 Clifton, and at 9:15 in St. Lucy's Church for Charles Leone, of 147 Scio, a veteran of World War I.

Mr. Leone, who died Monday (Oct. 11, 1943), leaves his wife, Mildred L. Hemmerich, and two brothers, George and Sam.

Funeral Arranged For W. N. Langworthy

Funeral services will be held at 2 p. m. tomorrow in the home, 133 Boardman St., for William N. Langworthy, junior civil engineer at the Barge Canal Terminal who died Saturday (Dec. 25, 1943). Burial will be in Sanborn Wednesday.

Mr. Langworthy, a native of Alfred, was a state employe for 35 years. He was graduated from Alfred University in 1907 and the next year entered the employ of the state at Niagara Falls. He joined the Barge Canal division in 1909 and came here in 1918.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Elma T. Langworthy; his mother, Mrs. Daniel B. Langworthy of Alfred; two sisters, Mrs. Clarence H. Hallenbeck and Mrs. E. Fritjof Hildebrand of Alfred; and a brother, Harry W. Langworthy, retired superintendent of schools at Gloverville.

An article in yesterday's Times-Union quoted Raefel Lopez, a native of Puerto Rico now living in Rochester, as opposing President Roosevelt's suggestion that Congress permit the people of the island to elect their own governor. He said this would not solve the problem of food supply for the island's population. That's true, but native politicians have been blaming the form of government for their troubles. Two million persons on an island the size of Puerto Rico constitute a subsistence problem in the best of times. With both imports of food and exports of the island's products badly hampered by lack of shipping and the U-boat menace, it's not surprising the Puerto Rican situation is acute.

Rites Planned Today For Ex-Policeman

Last rites for Herman J. Ludke, 69, of 21 Arnold Pk., retired policeman, will be held at 11 a. m. today in the Corbett Funeral Chapel, 756 Main St. E.

Mr. Ludke, who retired 12 years ago, died Saturday (Dec. 18, 1943). A native of Germany, he came to this country when a young man and was appointed to the Rochester Police Department in 1901, assigned to Exchange Street Station, out of which he worked for 20 years.

For almost that entire period he patrolled the night beat encompassing the Four Corners and the Front Street section. In those days that section was considered a "tough neighborhood." Policeman Ludke—a powerful man of more than 200 pounds—was known for his ability to terminate brawls without the aid of his nightstick. Fellow workers recall one night when Policeman Ludke was sent to a saloon at Main and Aqueduct Streets to investigate a fight. Inside he found two husky young men engaged in a slugging match that threatened to turn the establishment into a shambles. Polleman Ludke grasped the two belligerents by the necks, knocked their heads together and then carried them out the door—one under each arm.

Two years before his retirement he was transferred to University Avenue Station.

He leaves two daughters, the Misses Mary M. and Olga J. Ludke, five sisters and a brother. He will be buried in Mt. Hope Cemetery.

VETERAN AIDE AT CANAL POST PASSES IN CITY

W. A. Langworthy Long Engineer At Terminal

William N. Langworthy, 133 Boardman St., junior civil engineer at the Barge Canal Terminal and a state employe for 35 years, died yesterday (Dec. 25, 1943).

A native of Alfred, Mr. Langworthy was graduated from Alfred University in 1907 and the next year entered the employ of the state at Niagara Falls. He joined the Barge Canal division in 1909 and came to Rochester in 1918.

He leaves his widow, Mrs. Elma T. Langworthy; his mother, Mrs. Daniel B. Langworthy of Alfred; two sisters, Mrs. Clarence H. Hallenbeck and Mrs. E. Fritjof Hildebrand, of Alfred, and a brother, Harry W. Langworthy, retired superintendent of schools at Gloverville.

Funeral services will be conducted at the home at 2 p. m. Tuesday. Burial will be in Sanborn on Wednesday.

Ex-City Policeman Succumbs at 69

Herman F. Ludke, 21 Arnold Pk., retired city policeman, died yesterday (Dec. 18, 1943) at the age of 69.

Judge Lynn was born in East Bloomfield and spent his early years on a farm. Through his own efforts he attended Genesee Wesleyan Seminary, graduating there in 1875. He came to Rochester, studied law and was admitted to the bar in 1881.

Seven years later he became a county judge on the appointment of Gov. David B. Hill, filling the unexpired term of Judge John S. Morgan. In 1889 William E. Werner, a Republican, defeated him at the polls.

From then until Jan. 11, 1916, when he became U. S. marshal for the Western New York district, he campaigned actively for the Democratic Party each fall. He frequently was a delegate to state and national conventions.

At conventions he was sometimes mistaken for the late Senator Thomas J. Walsh. He was acquainted personally with every recent Democratic presidential candidate and was a close friend of William Jennings Bryan.

Judge Lynn served a term of several weeks as U. S. attorney for the Western New York district shortly before he was made marshal, but the Senate refused to confirm his nomination.

He had served as president of the Rochester Bar Association and was a member of many local civic and political groups.

He is survived by a daughter, Mrs. Joan Lynn Schild; a son, Maurice G. Lynn; three grandchildren, John D. Lynn 2nd, Joann Lynn and Mary Stuart Lynn; a sister, Miss Emma M. Lynn and a brother, Thomas M. Lynn. He was a brother of the late County Judge William F. Lynn. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Respected, Loved

Legal and political circles in Rochester and Monroe County lost one of their best loved and most respected figures in the death yesterday of Judge John D. Lynn. The community lost one of its leading citizens.

His title of judge was earned by early service on the bench, but it was a title of respect and affection which clung to him for years after that service.

In politics he was a Roosevelt Democrat, had been from the time when he and Louis Antisdale and others supported Franklin D. Roosevelt in some of his anti-Tammany fights as State Senator.

But all Democrats and all Republicans both respected and loved him.

Rites Planned Tomorrow For Former U.S. Marshal

Last rites for Judge John D. Lynn, Rochester's World War I marshal, will be conducted at 2 p. m. tomorrow at his home, 14 Lamberton Pk., where he died as result of a fall early yesterday (Jan. 21, 1943). He was 85.

Known as "the Grand Old Man of the Democratic Party" here, he was noted more for his accomplishments as U. S. marshal than as a jurist, a title gained in an interim appointment to the County Court bench in 1888.

On President Wilson's appointment Judge Lynn became U. S. marshal for Rochester and Western

New York in 1916. A few months later the country was at war. Reports were rife of German spies, poisoned food and plots against the Government. There was no Federal Bureau of Investigation or similar agency.

John D. Lynn

Though John D. Lynn, whose death has come in his 85th year, was appointed to the County Court bench in 1888, he was best known as U. S. Marshal for Rochester and Western New York during the World War.

This task he performed with remarkable insight and effectiveness. There were 16,000 aliens in the area to be enrolled. No serious trouble occurred.

Such difficulties as arose were handled with firmness by the marshal. But he took the humane and sensible view that well disposed persons of German birth should not be persecuted or annoyed, a policy which was fully vindicated by results.

Always a staunch Democrat, Judge Lynn was one of the elder statesmen of his party. He attended its conventions regularly for upwards of 50 years.

A well read man, with a large home library, John D. Lynn was noted for his wide knowledge of history and political events, both local and national.

Kindly, likeable, with a keen sense of humor, Judge Lynn had a host of friends who will regret his passing.

RITEs PLANNED TOMORROW FOR JOHN D. LYNN

To him fell the task of enrolling 16,000 aliens in this area, of guarding against espionage and maintaining friendly relations with the city's large German-American population. Violations of neutrality engaged his attention in the days before the United States entered the war.

But despite the vastness of the task, there was not a serious outbreak in the 17 counties and 22 cities under his jurisdiction. He continued as marshal until 1924, when he resigned to return to his law practice. Until an attack of pneumonia two years ago he had walked daily to his suite in the Wilder Building, but he had been in failing health since this illness.

A staunch 11th Ward Democrat, Judge Lynn had attended every national convention of the party for 50 years. One of his major disappointments in life was his inability to attend the 1936 convention so that he might again vote for Franklin D. Roosevelt, whom he had strongly admired since the days when the Chief Executive was a New York State senator.

Dead at 85.

Judge Lynn Dies in Fall At His Home

John D. Lynn, "grand old man" of the local Democratic party, former county judge and United States marshal, died in a fall down the stairs at his home, 14 Lamberton Pk., today. He was 85.

Judge Lynn fell shortly after 5 a. m. while walking near the stair well in the upper hallway of his home. He was pronounced dead by the physician of St. Mary's Hospital ambulance. Coroner David H. Atwater said death was accidental.

A one-time leader of the Democratic Party in Monroe County, Judge Lynn, as he continued to be known although no longer on the bench, was a distinguished figure of the 11th Ward. He had made his home in Lamberton Park for more than 40 years.

He had continued to walk to his law office in the Wilder Building almost daily until two years ago, when he suffered a pneumonia attack. Since that time he had been in failing health.

He leaves a sister, Miss Emma M. Lynn; a brother, Thomas M. Lynn; a son, Maurice G. Lynn; a daughter, Mrs. Joan Lynn Schild, and three grandchildren, John D. Lynn 2d, Joann Lynn and Mary Stuart Lynn.

Funeral services will be conducted at 2 p. m. Saturday at the home. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery.

Kept Interest Keen

Something picturesque has gone out of Monroe County's political life with the death recently of two best known Democratic figures, Judge John D. Lynn, and now John Pallace of Brockport.

In the days when Democrats were in a continuously hopeless minority, interest in their affairs concerned mainly their intra-mural contests. These rose to interesting debates, at times, in which more often than not Louis M. Antisdale, able and dynamic editor of the Democratic Rochester Herald, and John Pallace were the opposing leaders.

These contests in essence were good natured; opposing leaders respected each other. They served to keep public interest alive and, we may now believe, helped somewhat to increase citizen interest, and led to better government.

John Pallace was an able man, in some respects a scholarly man. He was likeable, and personally respected.

If in the end his political ambitions were defeated, he had many satisfactions; not the least of which was his wide and friendly personal acquaintance.

Judge Lynn Prominent In Democrat Circles

John D. Lynn, distinguished Rochester Democrat and former county judge who died today at his home, 14 Lambertson Pk., attended every national convention of his party for half a century. He was 85.

The first convention he missed in more than 50 years was in 1936 when illness prevented his going. Friends said it was one of the major disappointments of his life.

Ardent Roosevelt Backer

He was an ardent Roosevelt man and had known the President since the days when FDR was a state senator. At political conventions Judge Lynn, as he continued to be known up to his death, was often mistaken for the late Thomas J. Walsh whom he closely resembled.

Born in East Bloomfield, Ontario County Judge Lynn spent his early life on the farm. It was through his own efforts that he saved enough money to acquire an education.

He was graduated from Genesee Wesleyan Seminary at Lima, in 1875. He then came to Rochester and studied law, being admitted to the bar in 1881.

Named County Judge

Only seven years after being admitted to the bar, he was appointed a county court judge by Governor David Bennett Hill, to fill the unexpired term of Judge John S. Morgan. He was succeeded in 1889 by William E. Werner, elected on the Republican ticket.

Then followed long years of service to the Democratic Party with his wit and campaign eloquence in constant demand. He served frequently as a delegate to state conventions as well as all national conventions up until 1936.

On Jan. 11, 1916, Judge Lynn was appointed marshal by President Wilson, succeeding Henry L. Fassett of Elmira and the office for the Western New York district was moved from Elmira to Rochester.

He had been in office little more than a year when the United States entered World War I. To him fell the task of enrolling 18,000 aliens, of guarding against enemy espionage and preserving friendly relations with the district's many German-American residents.

Lauded for Work

Later even his political foes admitted he served with diplomacy and fairness to all in his difficult position, friends said today.

He continued as marshal until 1924, when he resigned to return to the practice of law. A Republican administration was about to appoint a successor.

Judge Lynn continued in the practice of law and an advisor in Democratic politics until two years ago. At one time he was president of the Rochester Bar Association and was a member of many political and civic organizations. He was a brother of the late County Judge William F. Lynn.

"His was an eventful life — one which brought him recognition from the state and national governments but, above all, the genuine love and regard of men and women irrespective of party or creed."

Judge Lynn died Jan. 21, 1943, at his home, 14 Lambertson Pk., at the age of 85.

Dr. Carl Ladd Succumbs At His Home in Freeville

DEAN CARL LADD

D & C JUL 24 1943
Dean of Agriculture
At Cornell Victim
Of Heart Disease

After graduating from the College of Agriculture, Cornell, in 1912, he took his doctor's degree work in the department of farm management at his alma mater, specializing in cost accounting, and received the degree in 1915. He then became director of the New York State School of Agriculture at Delhi and later, of the State School of Agriculture at Alfred.

In 1921 he undertook the duties of an extension professor in farm management at Cornell and for four years had charge of all the extension teaching in Agricultural Economics and farm management.

From 1925, Dr. Ladd held the position of director of extension at Cornell University. He supervised all of the extension activities of the two state colleges, including Farm and Home Bureau work, 4-H Club work, farmers' institutes, correspondence courses, radio instruction and various other activities.

Research in England

During 1928, Dr. Ladd spent months in England studying methods and organizing research work in agricultural economics and farm management for one of the English educational institutions. During that time he traveled extensively over England, Scotland and continental countries, completing his view of the agricultural world by studying conditions on farms and in the colleges and experiment stations.

As chairman of the New York State milk supply stabilization committee during the critical period of 1929-1930, Dr. Ladd was in particularly close touch with the economic problems of the New York State dairymen.

On July 16, 1918, he married Miss Frances Clark of Bradford, Vt. Dr. Ladd was a Mason and Rotarian. He attended the Presbyterian Church.

FARMERS LOSE STANCH FRIEND IN LADD DEATH

D & C JUL 24 1943

Death of Dr. Carl E. Ladd at his home near Ithaca last night removes from the scene the man who in recent years had more influence on New York agriculture than any other person in the state.

As dean of the New York State College of Agriculture, Ladd was known widely as an able administrator and sound thinker, thoroughly conversant with the needs of the state's producers and consumers. Aside from his professional abilities, Ladd was noted for two outstanding characteristics: "Keeping his ear close to the ground," and "sticking by his guns."

Ladd had little sympathy for classroom education alone. He not only kept himself informed on current practical needs in the farm field, but to a remarkable degree was able to anticipate future trends. This won for him widespread respect far beyond the state. A side of him less known to the public was in his relationship with Washington.

Agents of Government

The land-grant colleges, including Cornell, long have been the agents of the federal government in expending public funds for agricultural research and extension teaching. In recent years numerous federal programs relating to agriculture were wished onto the extension service in the states by Washington. Many of these were considered unsound from a Northeast point of view. On top of that, Washington bureaucracy sought to staff these programs with political appointees.

Ladd took a determined stand that the college would advocate no programs or practices that were considered unsound. He insisted that appointments to the extension service in his state were made entirely on ability and training, and that the same rule must apply in administering new activities undertaken by the service. When a paycheck was held up because an appointee did not have approval of a county political chairman, Ladd decided to face the issue. He declined to ask the local leader to approve the appointment, but went to Washington and told the national party chairman that unless the rule was withdrawn he would have to report the facts to the farmers. He won his point.

Visited Farmers

In his early years on the college staff Ladd was in the farm management department, which helps farmers plan and adjust their farm practices and business methods. Ladd constantly visited farmers, bringing to them information developed by the college and obtaining from them results of their practical experience. He gained from these contacts with farmers a wholesome respect for them and made numerous friendships. One of his chief delights in recent years was to visit a boy or girl students at Cornell and tell them about their parents as he knew them when they were getting a start in farming 25 or 30 years ago.

For a number of years Ladd had been a director of the Federal Land Bank and allied institutions at Springfield, Mass., serving the Northeast. His intimate knowledge of farm finances and needs enabled him to serve both the bank and its patrons so that they declined to allow him to retire.

The State College of Agriculture enjoyed its greatest growth in facilities and enrollment during the period of Ladd's deanship. Before the war he reported that student enrollment had doubled in a decade. He often said that expansion of the plant came "as farmers brought more work to us." He was especially emphatic that the ultimate aim of agricultural research was to serve consumers, estimating that 90 per cent of the benefits of such research passed on to consumers through cheaper or better food.

Ex-Engineer's Funeral Set for Tomorrow

Funeral services for Edward Frank Lacy of 42 Camden St., a New York Central Railroad engineer for 50 years, will be held in his home at 2 p. m. tomorrow.

Mr. Lacy died Wednesday night (July 25, 1945) in Municipal Hospital after a long illness. He leaves his widow, Mrs. Myrtle Lacy; three daughters, Mrs. Mary Holley of Los Angeles, Calif.; Mrs. Marjorie Stahl and Mrs. Virginia Cairns; two sons, Floyd E. of Syracuse and Charles E. Lacy of Pittsford. Burial will be in Woodlawn.

Loss to State and Nation

The untimely death of Dean Carl E. Ladd, of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, is a blow to state and nation.

Dr. Ladd had served as dean of both the Colleges of Agriculture and Home Economics at Cornell from 1932 until last year, when these two colleges were separated, and Miss Sarah G. Blanding was made dean of the Women's Division.

To enumerate the various services of Dean Ladd to agriculture in his state and in the nation would be almost impossible. It is, however, true that practically every move for progressive agriculture, or to promote a more intelligent approach to the vital problems of farm management and production, numbered Dean Ladd as a participant.

The Rochester area saw a great deal of Dean Ladd. He was a constant attendant at the meetings of the New York State Horticultural Society, held in this city each winter, and had made himself, as it seemed, indispensable to that organization, as a leader and counselor.

Dean Ladd was a great teacher of agriculture, and had much to do with making the Cornell College of Agriculture one of the outstanding schools of that type in the United States. His work not only contributed greatly to the practical functioning of the school as a teaching institution, but in the field of research important studies and discoveries were registered under Dr. Ladd's leadership.

Thus the thousands who knew Dean Ladd in New York State will remember him not only as a warm, friendly, human personality, but as a man whose scholarship was matched by practical knowledge and a common-sense approach to the day-by-day problems of the dirt farmer.

Dean Ladd did not live in his laboratory or class room. He lived in the world where men and women have to produce food, for the health and sustenance of the race.

He made a significant contribution to the life of his time, and will be greatly missed.

QUESTION: War Department officials say some form of compulsory service for women may come this year because of failure of American women to join the WAACs. Your opinion.

INTERVIEWED: Norman A. LaBar, 147 Lennox St. Said LaBar: I understand there is a great need for more women in the armed services to relieve men for combat duty. If the American women refuse to respond then I think there is no alternative but to have some form of compulsory service. However, I think every effort should be made to recruit the desired number before that step is taken.

FLYING PUPIL AT 15 GETS HIS REWARD AT 19 D. & C. APR 4 1943 Air Corps Awards Lieutenancy to Joseph Lentine

Joseph Lentine was 15—just a kid—when he signed up for the ground school training program offered in 1939 by The Democrat and Chronicle to interest boys and girls in aviation.

He's 19 now, and he has his wings as a second lieutenant in the United States Army Air Corps.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Lentine, 237 Lettington Ave., were mighty proud to hear about it. They poked through a scrap book and there found Joseph's picture on the day that he received his certificate from the Democrat and Chronicle Ground School of Aviation—just a simple little diploma that said he attained a scholarship average of 95½ for the term. Just a kid, he was.

After Joseph finished that preliminary study of airplanes he took instruction at the Municipal Airport in flying, and last year became Rochester's youngest commercial pilot and flight instructor. As a matter of fact after he received his credentials he had to wait for his 18th birthday to take the required examination.

He went into the Army in January. He's now at Rosecrans Field, St. Joseph, Mo. He was commissioned in Detroit.

For Lentine the span between a youngster tinkering with toy planes and a lieutenant with his wings wasn't quite four years.

13,000 Miles;
'Thumb Tired'

Norman Cornelius Lawrence is back home in Greece today after a six-months vacation in which he covered an estimated 13,000 miles at a total cost of $40.

Burned a deep bronze by United States and Mexican suns, the 33-year-old confectionery store clerk who lives at 146 Wyndhurst Dr., said he came home because the rainy season has set in in Mexico and his "thumb is tired."

He and a companion from Chicago hitch hiked their way as far south as Puntarenas, Costa Rico. Many times they were questioned by Central American police after being mistaken for foreign spies.

"Once," Lawrence laughingly related, "I was arrested as being a bank robber named Lorenzo." After an all-night investigation he was released.

Another time, Lawrence said, they were lost for two days in a Costa Rican desert without food or water, finally staggered to a grass hut on the edge of the sand.

"We thought we were through. That hut looked like a palace," he related.

Lawrence who first hooked his thumb beside the road in the zero-weather blizzard of late January went first to Chicago where he met Jacob Klein, another hitchhiker whom he met in Mexico a few years ago while "touring."

Honeoye Falls Man at 90 Tills Four Victory Gardens

Honeoye Falls—Charles Lericheux, native of London, England, will observe his 90th birthday anniversary today in the home of his daughter, Mrs. Levi Swartz, where he resides. A victory gardener at 90 with full care of four village gardens, the nonagenarian busies himself from morning until night. He cares for a garden of his daughter and son-in-law, takes care of a garden "down the street a piece," one "a piece across," and also cares in another part of the village. "It keeps me busy, I'll tell you," he said. And that there isn't a weed in sight, neighbors agree.

The 90-year-old gardener rises early, usually about 6 p. m., and his bedtime is about 9 p. m. He precedes retiring for the night with a lunch and bottle of beer. "Fellow said to me once leaving tobacco and liquor alone was the secret of longevity or health," he said, but his eyes twinkled as he added "a little beer hasn't seemed to hurt me any."

Enjoys Good Health

Despite his advanced years he has good health and "never was sick to amount to anything," he said.

He was two years old when he came from England with his parents, who settled in Canada. He worked in sawmills until he "went to farming." He lost part of two fingers on his right hand when 16. The accident occurred in a mill on the St. Lawrence River. "I run 'em in a saw," he told, "If I'd been tending to business it wouldn't have happened. Some fellows were cutting up on the ice on the river and I was watching."

He "lacked just a little of being 21" when he was married May 16, 1875, to Carrie Faulkner, whose death occurred about 22 years ago. He and his bride set up housekeeping on the fringe of the Adirondack region. He cleared a 750 acre farm there and "lumbered it all," with his own hands.

Faithful Church Goer

He is a faithful attendant at services at the Methodist Church. He "hasn't missed over two Sundays" this last year. During the vacation season, if there is no service at his own church, he attends another in the village. "I've always gone to church," he said.

He votes a Republican ticket but thinks Roosevelt should be elected President again. "I don't believe under present conditions there should be a change," he said.

He has resided 25 years in Honeoye Falls. Besides his daughter, he has two sons, James Lericheux of Camden, and Frank of Lacona, and eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren.

Dean Ladd of Cornell Dies After Short Illness

Ithaca—Dean Carl E. Ladd of the State College of Agriculture at Cornell University, a nationally-recognized authority on agricultural education, is dead at the age of 55. He succumbed last night to heart disease with which he was stricken Tuesday after returning from Springfield, Mass., where as a director he attended a meeting of the Federal Land Bank.

CARL E. LADD
Farm expert succumbs

Ladd died a few hours after State Police brought an oxygen mask from Syracuse University to his home at Freeville.

Connected most of his life with the state college, where he was named director of extension in 1925, Ladd was a member and onetime executive director of New York's Emergency Food Commission. He also was a member of the State War Council and its predecessor, the State Defense Council.

Ladd, a native of McLean, Tompkins County, was graduated from the College of Agriculture in 1912. In 1915 he became director of the State School of Agriculture at Delhiand, later, of the State School of Agriculture at Alfred.

Studied English Methods

In 1921, he became an extension professor in farm management at Cornell.

In 1928, Ladd spent six months in England, studying methods and organizing research work in agricultural economics and farm management for an English educational institution.

In 1929, then-Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt appointed him secretary of the governor's agricultural advisory commission, in which capacity he studied closely public problems in agriculture.

As chairman of the State Milk Supply Stabilization Committee in 1929-30, he was in particularly close touch with New York dairymen's economic problems.

Headed State Council

Ladd took a leave from Cornell in 1931 to serve as deputy state conservation commissioner. He was named dean of both the agriculture and home economics colleges in 1932, continuing until last year, when the schools were separated.

He served three years, beginning in 1933, as chairman of the State Agriculture Society. In 1936-38, he was chairman of the state planning council.

As dean of the New York State College of Agriculture, Ladd was known widely as an able administrator and sound thinker, thoroughly conversant with the needs of the state's producers and consumers. Aside from his professional abilities, Ladd was noted for two outstanding characteristics: "Keeping his ear close to the ground," and "atitcking" by his guns.

Ladd had little sympathy for class room education alone. He not only kept himself informed on current practical needs in the farm field, but to a remarkable degree was able to anticipate future trends. This won for him widespread respect far beyond the state. A side of him less known to the public was in his relationship with Washington.

The land-grant colleges, including Cornell, long have been the agents of the federal government in expending public funds for agricultural research and extension teaching. In recent years numerous federal programs relating to agriculture were wished onto the extension service in the states by Washington. Many of these were considered unsound from a northeast point of view.

Ladd took a determined stand that the college would advocate no programs or practices that were considered unsound. He insisted that appointments to the extension service in his state be made entirely on ability and training, and that the same rule must apply in administering new activities undertaken by the service.

Visited with Farmers

In his early years on the college staff Ladd was in the farm management department, which helps farmers plan and adjust their farm practices and business methods. Ladd constantly visited farmers, bringing to them information developed by the college and obtaining from them results of their practical experience. He gained from these contacts with farmers a wholesome respect for them and made numerous friendships.

Dr. Ladd was born Feb. 25, 1888, at McLean, Tompkins County, the son of Arnold D. and Mary E. Ladd. His early schooling was in District School No. 12, in the town of Groton. He attended the McLean High School and was graduated from the Cortland Normal School in 1907. Most of his early life was spent on a dairy farm.

Specialized in Accounting

After graduating from the College of Agriculture, Cornell, in 1912, he took his doctor's degree work in the department of farm management at his alma mater, specializing in cost accounting, and received the degree in 1915.

On July 16, 1918, he married Miss Frances Clark of Bradford, Vt. Dr. Ladd was a Mason and Rotarian. He attended the Presbyterian Church.

Survivors include his widow; a daughter, Mrs. Ferdinand Tate, Freeville; two sons, Carl F. Jr. of Freeville and Robert, in the Army, and a sister, Mrs. H. S. Fowler, Ithaca.

The funeral will be at 2:30 p. m. Monday in Sage Chapel on the Cornell campus. Burial, at McLean, will be private.

SIMPLE RITES MARK FUNERAL OF DEAN LADD D. & C. JUL 27 1945 Farm, Public Life Leaders Attend Services

By L. B. SKEFFINGTON

Ithaca — Sorrowing friends, among them leaders in agriculture and public life yesterday filled Sage Chapel on the Cornell University Campus to pay final tribute to Dr. Carl E. Ladd, for the past 11 years dean of the New York State College of Agriculture. Dr. Ladd died Friday night.

From the chapel the cortege wound its way some dozen miles over the hills of Central New York to the rural cemetery at McLean. There, a mile across the valley from the farm where he was born, he was laid at rest in a section of the country he loved to talk and write about. Nearby to the Ladd family plot are monuments to Revolutionary War soldiers. As the party reached the grave the silver wings of an Army bomber flashed in the sun.

Simple Rite at Grave

A simple prayer by the Rev. Edward Horn, Ithaca Lutheran pastor, was the only service at the grave. In Sage Chapel the same minister read the 23rd Psalm and other Scriptural passages. The assemblage stood in prayer and that was all. Dr. Ladd a year ago had said he did not relish much "fuss," so simplicity prevailed.

In the front pews along with members of the family, were the chief officers of the University, H. E. Babcock, chairman of the board of trustees; Frank Gannett, chairman of the executive committee; Dr. Liberty Hyde Bailey, former dean; President Edmund Extra Day, college and department heads, men with whom Dean Ladd had been associated for years.

U. S. State Aides Present

From Washington came M. L. Wilson, director of extension of the United States Department of Agriculture, and the state government at Albany was represented by Maurice C. Burritt, public service commissioner, and a former associate of Ladd on the college staff; M. P. Catherwood, state commissioner of commerce; Webster J. Birdsall, director of the Bureau of Markets; A. K. Getman, director of the Bureau of Agricultural Education of the State Department of Education; A. B. Buccholz, director of the Bureau of Plant Industry; T. N. Hurd, state farm manpower director; Harry H. Duncan, director of the Rochester office of the Department of Agriculture and Markets.

Various state and federal agencies were represented. Present were Joseph P. King, New York, assistant director of the United States Employment Service; L. A. Bevan, director of the New Jersey Extension Service, and a delegation of Army officers serving at Cornell.

Farm Organizations

Farm organization officers present included Fred H. Sexauer, Auburn, president, and Ernest C. Strobeck, Macedon, treasurer of the Dairymen's League; Frank W. Benaway, president of the New York and New England Apple Institute; Harold M. Stanley, Skaneateles, secretary of the State Grange; Edward S. Foster, Ithaca, general secretary of the State Farm Bureau Federation.

From Springfield, Mass., came a delegation of Farm Credit Administration officials. Dr. Ladd was a trustee of the Federal Land Bank and affiliated organizations. Present were Allen Gillette, Farm Credit Administration, general agent; E. H. Thompson, president of the Federal Land Bank; H. B. Munger, president of the Production Credit Corporation; George Lamb, president of the Bank of Co-operatives, and Bernard A. Colby, president of the Intermediate Credit Bank.

Worked Unstintedly

W. J. Wright, until recently state leader of junior extension at the college came from his home in Stockbridge, Mich., for the service.

As friends gathered in small groups to recall the life of Carl Ladd there was general feeling that he had shortened his life by unstinted devotion to his work, especially burdensome with the added load of wartime activities. Some months ago Dean Ladd was urged to save himself, but at the time he remarked that he was going to do anything he could "to bring the boys back home sooner." His son and son-in-law are in the Army.

Final Tribute Paid to F. W. Lovejoy

Friends and business associates of Frank W. Lovejoy, late chairman of Eastman Kodak Company's board of directors, who died Sunday (Sept. 16, 1945), gathered at his bier in First Universalist Church today to pay tribute.

The body rested in state from 9 a. m. to noon. Funeral services were held at 2 p. m., with burial in Riverside Cemetery.

The eulogy at the final rites was delivered by the Rev. William Wallace Rose, former minister at First Universalist, now of Lynn, Mass.

Except for certain continuous operations, the three Eastman Kodak Company plants, the office building and Distillation Products Inc., a subsidiary, were closed in respect to Mr. Lovejoy's memory.

Lovejoy's Integrity, Service Cited at Rites

"His desk at Kodak Park and his home in the hills were the two poles in his life. And to both he brought the best that he had."

Officiating yesterday at the last rites for Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of directors of the Eastman Kodak Company, who died Sunday (Sept. 16, 1945), the Rev. William Wallace Rose, of Lynn, Mass., former minister of the First Universalist Church, where the services were held described the Kodak executive as a simple, straightforward, frank and warm-hearted man, devoted to public welfare.

"In a career covering nearly five decades," the Rev. Mr. Rose said, "Frank Lovejoy never lost a friend or made an enemy, yet kept his integrity to the end."

Commenting on Mr. Lovejoy's qualities of generosity and humanity, the minister declared that the executive had been a good layman and churchman, serving as chairman of the board of the church in which the services were held.

"Frank Lovejoy helped to create the Rochester tradition of public service and private rectitude, and was himself an example of that tradition at its highest and best. He was a good man," the Rev. Mr. Rose concluded.

Frank W. Lovejoy, Head of Kodak, Succumbs at 73

Other Story, Page 17

Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of the Eastman Kodak Company, died of a heart ailment yesterday at Strong Memorial Hospital. He was 73.

A career man with Kodak, Mr. Lovejoy first became associated with the company in 1898 at a time when Kodak Park, only six years old, comprised 14 small buildings huddled in farm-surrounded 10 acres.

Under the watchful eye of the late George Eastman, his rise kept pace with the growth of the company. At the time of his death, Kodak Park, largest of the Eastman plants, included 100 large buildings on 400 acres.

A vigorous and active man through most of his life, with numerous diverse interests, Mr. Lovejoy was forced to limit his activities after he suffered a serious heart attack in July, 1944. He had not been in good health since and was taken to the hospital a week ago.

Funeral Wednesday

Funeral services will be held in the First Universalist Church at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Burial will be in Riverside Cemetery. The body will lie in state at the church from 10 a. m. to noon Wednesday.

The Rev. William Wallace Rose, formerly minister of the First Unitarian Church here, now of Lynn, Mass., will come to Rochester to speak at the funeral service.

Born in Concord, N. H., Dec. 11, 1871, son of George L. and Caroline Neal Lovejoy, the future Kodak head received grammar and high school education in Concord and was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1894.

His first job after graduation was with the Cinclare Central factory, a sugar-refining concern, in Baton Rouge, La. Six months later, receiving a better offer, the young chemical engineer joined Curtis, Davis & Co., Cambridgeport, Mass., soap manufacturers and nucleus of the present large plant of Lever Brothers.

Second Opportunity

At Cambridgeport, he received and turned down his first offer from Kodak. The young photographic business had introduced flexible film to the world a few years earlier and Darragh De Lancey, a fellow Tech graduate and manager of the new Kodak Park Works in Rochester, needed a superintendent of his celluloid department. Young Lovejoy enjoyed his work with the soap company and knew nothing of film or photography.

FRANK W. LOVEJOY

Opportunity knocked a second time when De Lancey, in Boston on a holiday weekend, signed up young Lovejoy after a day's persuasion. The new executive was to receive $18 a week, which was $3 more than he received at the soap plant.

Space in all the Kodak Park buildings was at a premium, and Lovejoy shared a desk with the plant chemist. Even this arrangement was relatively luxurious, for most of the men worked either at common kitchen tables or small wooden boxes with hinged tops.

The new department superintendent found himself catapulted into a series of new tasks and responsibilities. Not only did he have to familiarize himself with the operations under his charge, but he also needed to learn the elements of picture-taking. For his spare time, which was not extensive, he was assigned to conduct a series of experiments for the manager, as he was the only technical school graduate at the plant.

Mr. Lovejoy had not been working long at Kodak when George Eastman wrote his early partner, Col. Henry Alvah Strong: "Mr. Lovejoy is taking hold fully as well as I expected. He may turn out to be a very valuable manager."

Made Plant Manager

This opinion was given practical effect with his promotion to assistant manager of Kodak Park Works just two years after he came to Rochester. A year later, he was plant manager. That was only the beginning. In 1906, "graduating" from Kodak Park, he became general manager of manufacturing departments for the whole company as well as one of its directors.

His subsequent stages of elevation in the management of the business were election to a vicepresidency in 1919; appointment as general manager in 1925; election as president in 1934, continuing as general manager, and election as chairman of the board of directors in 1941.

The year 1900 was one of far-reaching significance in the photographic industry. That year, under Mr. Lovejoy's direction, Kodak began the manufacture of film base in continuous strips several feet wide on huge, slowly-revolving wheels. Previously film had been made in comparatively short pieces on glass-topped tables.

The transition to manufacture in continuous strips meant greater uniformity, new quality standards, new economies through quantity production and provision for enough film to meet the tremendous demands of the modern age, including those of the motion picture industry.

Cuts Unemployment

Mr. Lovejoy's ability also produced administrative achievements of permanent value. One of his first was the reduction of seasonal instability of unemployment. Because of the plan he worked out, the evil of seasonal unemployment was virtually eliminated in spite of the highly seasonal nature of sales of some of the most important Eastman products.

When Mr. Lovejoy in 1941 relinquished the heavy duties of general manager, he was able to select company activities with which he desired to concern himself. Foremost among these interests was the welfare of the company employees and their relations with the company.

Besides his Kodak connections, Mr. Lovejoy was a life member of the corporation of Massachusetts Institute of Technology. Through his good offices, a meeting took place between Mr. Eastman and the MIT president which paved the way to the Kodak founder's gift of more than $20,000,000 to the Massachusetts institution.

Mr. Lovejoy also was a trustee of the University of Rochester, a former director and former vice-president of the National Association of Manufacturers, member of the executive committee of the National Industrial Conference Board and formerly chairman of its board of directors; a trustee of the Chamber of Commerce; a director and executive committee member of the Security Trust Company and an early president of the Rochester City Club.

Honors received included the honorary degree of doctor of laws from Colby College and from St. Lawrence University; an honorary doctorate of science from Lawrence College; the civic medal of the Rochester Museum and the annual civic award of the Rochester Rotary Club.

Gifts to Causes

Mr. Lovejoy had been a large contributor to various Rochester causes, especially the Community Chest and the Civic Music Association.

For many years he had a farm in Henrietta, which was his summer home and outside interest. When he had time, he enjoyed shotgun shooting, both skeet and pheasants. He was member of a gun club, members of which are from all walks of life, and one fellow member with whom Mr. Lovejoy seemed especially to enjoy himself was a steam-shovel operator.

The Kodak executive also was a member of the American Chemical Society, American Society of Mechanical Engineers, Rochester Engineering Society, Phi Beta Epsilon and the Masons. His club memberships included the University, Rochester, Genesee Valley, Country Club and Monroe Golf Club, the Technology Club and Engineers' Club of New York City.

Mr. Lovejoy was an active member of the Fortnightly Club, a discussion group which held monthly meetings at homes of members.

Surviving near relatives are the widow, the former Florence I. Fuller whom he married in 1907; two sons, Lt. Frank W. Lovejoy Jr., a physician serving with the Navy and Frederic Fuller Lovejoy, a technician fifth class, doing photographic work in the Army. A son, George L. Lovejoy and a daughter, Harriet Fuller Lovejoy, are deceased.

Lind, Marine Garrison Force, Pearl Harbor, Hawaii; Pvt. Dorothy J. Lind, Marine Corps Air Station, Quantico, Va., and Elizabeth Ann Lind, Rochester. Funeral services will be held from the D. Rochester civic and industrial leaders yesterday expressed grief over the passing of Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of directors of the Eastman Kodak Company. Some of their statements follow.

Thomas J. Hargrave, president of the Eastman Kodak Company—"Mr. Lovejoy was the finest man I have ever known—fine in every way. His capacity for leadership and executive ability was outstanding. But somehow I feel he will be remembered most for his abiding faith in people. He was truly a great humanitarian.

"Many times he told me that good human relations counted more than anything in this world. His entire life in Kodak was devoted to that attainment. I honestly believe that most of the time he was thinking how to improve the lot of the other fellow. He will be missed and mourned by thousands in Kodak and Rochester.

"All of us must resolve to carry on in the spirit of fairness and the consciousness of right that dominated his life—for that is the one thing he would want us to do. That could well be our memorial to him. Rochester has lost its greatest citizen. We must preserve what he created."

William F. Strang, president of the Rochester Chamber of Commerce—"Mr. Lovejoy was one of the foremost citizens of Rochester and an extremely capable successor to George Eastman. His death will be a great loss to the community not only because he was a leading industrialist, but because he was a man of broad civic interests."

Postmaster Donald A. Dailey—"Frank Lovejoy will be missed not only by his close associates in business, but by the entire community,

I had the pleasure of knowing him for many years, and always had the greatest respect for his great civic interest."

M. Herbert Eisenhart, president of Bausch & Lomb Optical Company—"I think Rochester has lost its outstanding citizen, and I have lost a close and loyal friend of 35 years. His going is a tremendous loss to the community."

Frank Gannett, publisher of The Gannett Newspapers—"Rochester has suffered a great loss in the death of Frank Lovejoy. Few citizens gave so much to the welfare of the community as did he. He took a deep interest in civic matters and gave much of his time to all projects which he considered deserving of support.

"For years the head of one of the country's greatest industries, he made a remarkable record and won a wide and favorable reputation. The Kodak Company under his direction enjoyed great growth and prosperity. To him goes a large measure of credit for the progress the company has made in every way. He had been close to Mr. Eastman for many years and, as his successor, followed his policies so far as possible.

"Everyone who knew Mr. Lovejoy was impressed by his integrity and high-mindedness. He strove to be fair in all matters. He was tolerant of the opinions of others who might disagree with him. I saw him many times under conditions that might have exasperated anyone else, but I never saw him lose his temper or his equanimity. Frank Lovejoy, modest, loyal, faithful, was in every way one of the finest men I have ever met, and I am heartsick that he no longer will be with us."

Harper Sibley, former president of the United States Chamber of Commerce—"Mr. Lovejoy's death is personally and to the city. His character and whole fine point of view has impressed itself on the entire city. The influence of his fine living and fair dealing was great."

Raymond N. Ball, president of the Lincoln-Rochester Bank and Trust Company, director of the Eastman Kodak Company and University of Rochester trustee—"Frank W. Lovejoy will long be remembered as a man who contributed greatly to the building of an industry known throughout the world, who had a keen personal interest in the welfare of its employees and who gave wholeheartedly of himself in support of worthwhile community endeavors. He will be missed by hundreds of people in all walks of life who treasured his warm and kindly friendship. Rochester has lost one of its finest and most useful citizens."

Roland B. Woodward, former executive vicepresident of the Chamber of Commerce—"In the death of Frank Lovejoy Rochester has lost one of its really distinguished citizens. Though he carried great responsibilities in the extraordinary growth of the Eastman Kodak Company, he somehow found time to be concerned about and to contribute his time, influence and money to the solution of many Rochester problems. His approach to these problems was always from the human side. Like George Eastman, he had vision and deep human understanding of what business could do to promote human welfare. He was a quiet man of personal charm and great simplicity. Many of us have lost a loyal friend."

Edward G. Miner, chairman of the board of Pfaunder Company—

"When Frank W. Lovejoy went home, Rochester lost a citizen it cannot replace. He was a man of sterling integrity, whose high ideals made this city a better place for his having lived. The executive head of one of the world's great industries, he nevertheless could always find time to give gladly of his wealth and counsel for the things which went to make for the betterment of life in the community and the nation.

"I shall miss him personally, for he was my friend for more than a quarter of a century."

Mayor Samuel B. Dicker—"I am deeply grieved to learn of Mr. Lovejoy's death. He was one of Rochester's outstanding citizens, who was intensely devoted to everything that was best for our city. We shall miss his wise counsel and participation in our community's civic and industrial activities."

James M. Spinning, superintendent of schools—"I am tremendously shocked by the news of his death. He will be missed as one of Rochester's leading citizens and as a contributor to the city's advanced social thinking. Although I did not know Mr. Lovejoy personally, I know his passing will be a great loss to the community."

George H. Clark, president of the Cochrane-Bly Company and a director of Eastman Kodak—"I had known Frank Lovejoy since he first came to Rochester in 1897, and have valued him very highly ever since as a personal friend. I don't know any other man in Rochester who has been any more valuable to his community or who had any more friends. I know the Board of Directors of the Eastman Kodak Company will regret his loss keenly, not only for the sake of the company, but for the whole community."

Edward A. Halbleib, general manager of Delco Appliance Division, General Motors Corporation—"I knew him as a friend and a wonderful man, both as an industrialist and a philanthropist. He always contributed above the ordinary to all Rochester's civic undertakings as well as those of a charitable nature."

Gilbert J. C. McCurdy, president and treasurer of McCurdy & Company, Inc.—"Frank Lovejoy will be keenly missed not only by those with whom he was associated in business and in his many community activities, but by a host of others in the everyday walks of life to whom he was always a friend."

Louis W. Johnson, president of Sibley, Lindsay & Curr Company—"In recent years, it has been my privilege to have known Frank W. Lovejoy. I am saddened by the news of his death. Rochester has indeed lost a truly great leader, whose many fine qualities endeared him to all who knew him."

Alan Valentine, president of the University of Rochester—"Rochester has lost not only one of its most distinguished citizens, but also one of its most deeply loved leaders. Many qualities brought to Frank Lovejoy the high place in the councils of industry, education and civic affairs he so richly deserved, but the greatest of these qualities were his human kindness and his uncompromising integrity. The trustees of the University will sadly miss a loyal and wise associate, but like all who knew him, they will miss even more a modest and genuine personal friend. To Mrs. Lovejoy and his family go not only our sympathy, but our deep pride that such a man loved and served so well Rochester and its University."

Lovejoy Rites Set; Chairman Of Kodak

Times-Union SEP 17 1945

Funeral services for Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of directors of Eastman Kodak Company since 1941, will be held in First Universalist Church at 2 p. m. Wednesday.

Mr. Lovejoy died of a heart ailment yesterday (Sept. 16, 1945) in Strong Memorial Hospital. He was 73. The body will lie in state at the church from 9 a. m. to noon Wednesday. It has been requested that the hours, 9 to 11 a. m., be reserved for Kodak employes and their families.

The Rev. William Wallace Rose, formerly minister of the church here, now of Lynn, Mass., will speak at the funeral services.

Mr. Lovejoy served as president and general manager of Kodak from 1934 until his appointment as board of directors chairman.

He had been associated with the firm for 47 years, and was one of the principal factors in shaping its development.

Born in Concord, N. H.

Born in Concord, N. H., Dec. 11, 1871, he attended public grammar and high schools in that community and was graduated from Massachusetts Institute of Technology in 1894 with the degree of bachelor of science in chemical engineering.

Eighteen years later, Mr. Lovejoy made the arrangements for a meeting between George Eastman and the president of the institute which prepared the way for Mr. Eastman's donation of more than 20 million dollars to that college.

After his graduation, Mr. Lovejoy took a job with a sugar refining company in West Baton Rouge, La., leaving six months later to become chemist for Curtis Davis & Company, soap manufacturers in Cambridgeport, Mass.

Joined Kodak in 1897

Mr. Lovejoy's association with the photographic industry began in 1897 when he became superintendent of the celluloid department at the six-year-old Kodak Park plant at $18 a week. Two years later he was promoted to assistant manager of the Kodak Park Works and a year later was plant manager.

FRANK W. LOVEJOY
Helped build Kodak

In 1905 he became general manager of manufacturing departments for the whole company and a director.

He rose to the vicepresidency in 1919 and in 1926 was appointed general manager. In 1934 he became president as well as general manager and continued in the dual role until 1941 when he became chairman of the board of directors.

Enjoyed Farm Life

In 1907 Mr. Lovejoy married Florence L. Fuller of Springfield, Mass. The couple had four children: Harriet Fuller Lovejoy and George Lyman Lovejoy, both deceased; Lt. Frank W. Lovejoy Jr., a physician in the Navy during World War II and Frederic Fuller Lovejoy, a sergeant in the Army, engaged in photographic work.

For the last several years Mr. Lovejoy and his wife resided at their farm in Henrietta, where Mr. Lovejoy indulged his interest in shotgun shooting.

ROCHESTER TIMES-UNION, TH

Lovejoy Eulogy Cites Role as Public Servant

"Frank W. Lovejoy helped to create the Rochester tradition of public service and private rectitude, and was himself an example of that tradition at its highest and best."

So declared the Rev. William Wallace Rose, D.D., minister of First Universalist Church of Lynn, Mass., in the eulogy he delivered yesterday for Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of Eastman Kodak Company's board of directors, in First Universalist Church here. Dr. Rose was minister of the church here from 1919 to 1928, during which pastorate Mr. Lovejoy was chairman of the church's board of trustees. Mr. Lovejoy died Sunday (Sept. 16, 1945).

Humanness, Humor Cited

Dr. Rose said in his address: "There are so many things which clamor to be said as we gather to perform the last tender offices of faith and love for Frank W. Lovejoy, that one hardly knows where to begin or end. Everyone here could speak some word, cite some instance in which his humanness and humor, his understanding, his readiness to serve, his quiet, uncompromising convictions, his devotion to the public welfare found expression. All these and more marked the man in whose honor and remembrance we are met."

Frank Lovejoy was no strange, complex personality, difficult to fathom or set along with. He was simple and straightforward, comfortable to be around, frank and yet warmhearted. He would back you in whatever you were trying to do if you were trying your best, but he had no patience with shoddy work. All the strong, simple virtues showed in him, without prettiness or vanity. Indeed, the modesty of his bearing might lead the unknowing to underrate his immense gifts.

And to this we must add that he loved the city of his adoption, his friends, his home, his family and his country with simple directness. His desk in Kodak Park and his home in the hills were the two poles of his life. And to both he brought the best he had. In a career covering nearly five decades, Frank Lovejoy never lost a friend or made an enemy, yet kept his integrity to the end. Called Good Churchman.

Between his office and his home stood his church. Always a worshipper here, after the faith of his fathers learned in the New Hampshire hills, Mr. Lovejoy was a good layman and churchman. He guided this parish over many years as chairman of the board, and his quiet attentiveness from the pew, and his brief but warm words of commendation or encouragement were something to be prized.

Beyond any formal profession of faith, his religion was that of all good men, regardless of creed—to do justly, love mercy and walk humbly.

But the real sense of loss which this hour commemorates will be felt in that home where, in the bosom of the family he was the same generous, considerate person the world knew. In consequence there was harmony there and good-humored comradeship.

To that dedicated hearthstone, halloved the more by the sorrows which also entered there, we give sympathy. And we share with his wife and sons their pride and joy in a long life usefully lived.

All the things which might be said here, cannot be said. For time does not permit, nor is it necessary. Everything summed up, I would say that Frank W. Lovejoy helped to create the Rochester tradition of public service and private rectitude, and was himself an example of that tradition at its highest and best. He was a good man.

Frank W. Lovejoy

The often somewhat formal phrase, "his death means a great loss to the city," has real and deep application in the case of Frank W. Lovejoy, chairman of the board of the Eastman Kodak Company.

Mr. Lovejoy was long close to George Eastman, who early recognized his ability as an executive and his high personal qualities. And after Mr. Eastman's death Frank Lovejoy carried on the traditions of management established under the founder, including the close tie between Rochester as a community and its largest industrial enterprise.

Also, Mr. Lovejoy was typical of the change which has come over American business. As large companies continue, after those who laid their foundations are gone and stockholders tend to become investors rather than active directors of the enterprise, management assumes a role and place of its own.

It has responsibility to the stockholders, but in the most enlightened and progressive companies it also feels equal responsibility to the great body of employes who constitute the working force.

As plant executive, general manager, president and chairman of the board of Eastman Kodak, Frank W. Lovejoy assuredly felt such responsibility for the interests of the workers.

One of his permanent administrative achievements was stabilization of employment. Originally, with the making of photographic film as its chief operation and source of income, Eastman Kodak was to some extent a seasonal business. The record shows that under the plans which Mr. Lovejoy worked out the evil of seasonal unemployment was virtually eliminated.

This was no easy or simple task. Some department heads maintained that in their particular divisions such stabilization of employment was impossible. Yet under Mr. Lovejoy's quiet yet firm insistence, the aim was accomplished.

Kodak necessarily has many specialists, men highly expert in some line of production or research. Frank Lovejoy, though a capable engineer and technician, showed his ability particularly in knowing how to foster teamwork and direct the work of other brilliant men toward a common aim. They both respected and trusted him.

Mr. Lovejoy was deeply interested in Rochester as a community. He was not only a supporter of such undertakings as the Community Chest and the Civic Music Association but was a popular member of many smaller groups.

He will be remembered not only as an able industrial leader but as one who was a personal factor of great value in Rochester life.
